

No Action on Defense Plan Shifts, FDR Says

New Confab Today With Commission

Washington — (AP) — President Roosevelt told a press conference today that nothing has been decided yet about revising the setup of the defense commission.

Asserting that he was not ready to say anything about it at this time, the president said he did not know whether any announcement on the subject might be expected later in the day, after an afternoon conference with members of the commission.

As for reports of some re-arrangement to put a three-man group in charge, the president characterized them as newspaper stories. It was disclosed yesterday that consideration was being given to the establishment of a "high command" for the defense program, composed of Secretary Knox, Secretary Stimson and William S. Knudson of the defense commission.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said yesterday that consideration was being given to the high command idea, and it was on the basis of this that the stories were published.

Mr. Roosevelt said that only one of four or five setups and combinations under consideration and nothing had been decided on yet.

Enough Money

When a reporter asked a question about stories that approximately 30 Danish ships tied up in American waters would be taken over by this government for turning over to Britain, Mr. Roosevelt said it was a new one on him.

To an inquiry as to whether he intended to ask the new congress for more money for the RFC to finance construction of munitions factories, Roosevelt said he was under the impression there already was enough money.

He was informed that some persons had said his new, tentative plan for a "lease and lend" system of supplying Great Britain with arms would require repeal of the Johnson act, which forbids loans to nations in default on their last World War debts to the United States.

The chief executive repeated what he had said last Tuesday—that congressional action would be needed, but that he did not believe repeal of the Johnson law would be necessary.

3 Decisions Delayed

While the president, on his cruise to Caribbean and Atlantic defense base sites had described Mayagüez island in the Bahamas as not entirely satisfactory, a reporter told him the duke of Windsor had signed a bill permitting establishment of a base there.

The president remarked that an awful lot of nonsense had been written about the bases and that decisions were being delayed on only three out of eight.

The three are at Trinidad, which he said was a big island with many sites; Bermuda, where the biggest problem is interfering the least with the sleep and happiness of American tourists, and Mayagüez. At the latter, he said there was a very excellent lagoon that could be used for seaplanes, but that anchorage for ships was poor.

Recalling that on the cruise, the U. S. S. Tuscaloosa and her escort destroyers had reached Mayagüez about sundown, the president said they had tried three separate times to find a place where their anchors would reach bottom and the ships would not blow ashore.

Under the water, he explained, there is a cliff. Outside of it, he said, are thousands of feet of water, and if the anchor is dropped on the cliff, vessels are too close to shore when there is a wind.

The Tuscaloosa and the destroyers, he said, had to steam up and down the island all night because they could not anchor.

While we saw several islands in the Bahamas, no conclusions were reached about them, the president said, and it may be necessary to go back to Mayagüez.

Discuss Aid to Britain

The inter-related questions of arms production speedup and British aid were discussed at length.

They Went Out With the Brown Derby

Residents of New York view the bright lights of Broadway with twinges of nostalgia, remembering the good old days when it was rightfully named "The Great White Way." Now a white light on that famous thoroughfare would be as hard to find as a snowball in the lower regions. It's a colorful area we live in, and by the way, here's a Post-Crescent Want Ad that kept abreast of the times and got streamlined results.

CHICAGO BUND RECORDS SEIZED—Mrs. Irene Matz, secretary of the German-American Bund in Chicago, made a list of records seized in the bund offices by Sergeant Steve Leddy (right) of that state's attorney's police and other officers, before they were removed. A municipal court investigator who declined use of his name said the records included a list of between 1,500 and 2,000 army and navy officers and privates who apparently were members of the bund.

Oneida Pastor, 55, Collapses, Dies After Mass

Rev. A. A. Vissers Active in Mission Field for 30 Years

Identified with work in the mission field at Oneida since 1910, the Rev. A. A. Vissers, 55 pastor of the Immaculate Conception church at Hobart and the St. Joseph church at Oneida, died unexpectedly at 7:30 this morning. The Rev. Father Vissers collapsed while returning to the parish rectory from St. Joseph church where he said mass. He was found dead on the sidewalk by Lambert Rentmeester, janitor.

The Rev. Father Vissers was one of the first two students to attend St. Norbert college at DePere, entering in 1898. He assumed the Norbertine habit Dec. 23, 1902, and made his vows Dec. 23, 1904. He received a bachelor of arts degree at St. Norbert's and was ordained to the priesthood March 19, 1908. In the Catholic church, Father Vissers was heralded as the first native American member of the Norbertine order to be ordained in this country. For years he was friend and counselor of the Oneida, serving them in legal matters and in sickness as well as spiritually.

He served as assistant pastor at St. Francis church, Manitowish, Mich.

Charge Milwaukee Man With Slaying Wife

Milwaukee — (AP) — Gaetano Genova, 57, was charged with first degree murder in a warrant issued yesterday by District Attorney Herbert J. Sieffels. The charge was based on the slaying of Genova's wife yesterday. Genova surrendered to police and informed them of his wife's death.

The $10,000 had been consigned to a bank here.

Snow and Ice Melt Rapidly; Weekend to be Clear, Mild

A clear, mild weekend was forecast for Appleton and vicinity today.

Without qualifications, the weatherman predicted fair weather Saturday and Sunday, with rising temperatures.

Threat of further damage to power and telephone lines was dispelled today as mild temperatures melted ice and snow. The mild weather made a mess out of streets but effectively cleared trees and wires of their collections of sleet.

The weather added another antic to its freakish behavior. The temperature varied only one degree in Appleton during the 24-hour period ended at 9 o'clock this morning. It was 34 degrees at that hour this morning. Weather charts show that lowest reading during the period was 33 at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was 34 degrees at 12:30 this afternoon.

The sleet epidemic was over, but its results were still evident. Repair crews from the Wisconsin Michigan Power company and the Little Damage As Quake Hits Eastern States

Buildings Rocked; Many Persons Are Thrown From Beds

Boston — (AP) — An earthquake centering in New England and felt from southern New Jersey to Montreal, Canada, early today shook heavy buildings, caused slight damage and threw thousands of persons into panic.

Prof. L. Don Leet of the Harvard university observatory at Harvard, Mass., said it appeared to be strongest just south of Lake Ossipee, N. H., and that it lasted 30 seconds. Awakened by the rumbling as he timed it at 1:27:29 a. m. (C.S.T.).

Woman Thinks Quake Is Burglar on Porch

Saugus, Mass. — (AP) — An excited woman telephoned police headquarters early today to report that there was "a man rattling the window on my porch."

"Is he there now?" asked the desk officer.

"I don't hear him."

"Madam," the officer explained, "you have just been visited by an earthquake."

Their homes swayed, men, women and children in cities as far west as Rochester, and Syracuse, N. Y., arose in alarm.

Some New Englanders dashed, scantily-clad, to the streets. Many reported that they thought there had been an explosion. Virtually whole communities were roused in some instances. Telephone lines in newspaper offices were clogged with calls from frightened persons.

Thrown from Bed

In numerous cases, persons reported they were thrown from their beds, and in one instance, a baby from a crib.

New England bore the brunt of the quake with lighter tremors being felt in New Jersey, Philadelphia and in the Long Island and valley sections of New York. The shock in Montreal was enough to awaken sleepers and shake small ornaments from shelves but no damage was reported there.

Available reports of damage in New England indicated it was confined largely to cracked plaster and broken windows.

Coast guards in their headquarters in the upper part of Boston's custom house tower, tallest building in the city, said they were shaken severely.

Residents of Barre, Vt., said the quake was accompanied by a "roar."

Dies Seeks to Learn If Alien Agents are Active in California

Washington — (AP) — The Dies committee heard two witnesses behind closed doors today in an investigation of possible sabotage in airplane plants in southern California.

None of the members would discuss the hearing except Representative Voorhis (D-Calif.) subcommittee chairman who recently conducted hearings at Los Angeles.

"The committee is making an effort to determine whether these matters are as serious as the committee is inclined to think they are," Voorhis said.

"I'm supposed to be subcommittee chairman and we're trying to inquire into this matter and we have no license to make this public until the committee meets."

Two men who left the hearing room said their names were Francis Clancy and Del Kear, both of Los Angeles, but they declined to identify themselves further. They were accompanied by a man who said he was Rankin Daugette, a Dies committee investigator.

Voorhis repeatedly declined to discuss the nature of the testimony of the witnesses, but recalled that Attorney General Jackson had written him a letter a week ago saying that the government was powerless to investigate sabotage at domestic airplane plants which were working on foreign orders. He said that he was working on legislation to plug the loophole and planned to introduce it shortly.

French Soldiers on Way to Their Homes

Geneva, Switzerland — (AP) — A trainload of singing, shouting French soldiers who have been interned in Switzerland since June arrived here today enroute to their homes in unoccupied France.

They were the first of the internees — there are 30,000 altogether in Switzerland — to leave under a release agreement between the French, German and Swiss governments.

They are slated to enter France late today when a Swiss military checkup is completed.

Only small units of the French medical corps had been permitted to return to France before the formal agreement was reached.

British Warships Shell Italian Port in Albania

Fascists at Bardia Fight Off Attacks

Cairo, Egypt — (AP) — British troops have completely surrounded the Libyan port of Bardia and are preparing for a final assault on the Italian-held town, it was reported here tonight.

Cairo, Egypt — (AP) — Italian troops defending the beleaguered Libyan port of Bardia were reported today to be offering fierce resistance to the assaults of a numerically inferior but highly mobile British force said to have blocked their line of retreat.

British officials estimated that approximately 20,000 men were holding out in the encircled frontier post, protected by a cunningly concealed network of tank traps, land mines and machine-gun emplacements.

They hinted it might take some time to overrun the positions, but expressed no doubt over the final victory, which the British high command was attempting to speed by hastening more men and equipment to the front.

Military circles here said the stiff resistance encountered at Bardia was not likely to lessen the activity of British tanks and Bren gun carriers which were reported mopping up the road leading westward to Tobruk, vital Italian naval base 80 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

Battle Predicted

Reports from Rome indicated that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, commander of Italy's North African armies, might select Tobruk as the site for a conclusive test of strength with General Archibald P. Wavell's army of the Nile.

There was no indication here that the British intended to avoid such a reckoning or to permit Graziani to reinforce his position at Tobruk.

The British navy was reported keeping the Libyan coast under bombardment from the Egyptian frontier to Bengasi, well to the west of Tobruk, while the Royal Air Force blasted at Derna and Benina.

Indications here of heavy British troop movements to the west gave emphasis to Prime Minister Winston Churchill's statement before the house of commons yesterday in London that "the offensive is by no means at an end."

The task of maintaining steadily lengthening lines of communication was regarded here as one of the chief problems facing the British in continuing their drive into Libya.

Losses in manpower apparently constituted a negligible factor, for official figures yesterday put British casualties at less than 1,000.

Royal Air Force In Raids on Reich

London — (AP) — The R. A. F. flew through bad weather last night and attacked "several targets in the Ruhr and in western Germany," concentrating on oil plants and storage facilities, the air ministry announced today.

The ministry communique said that the targets also included power stations, a railway junction and Essen, site of the great Krupp armament works. Four explosions from heavy bombs were reported in the Essen assault.

A low level attack on the Rhine city of Bonn caused "one very large fire."

"In the Duisburg area two large fires were observed and oil targets near Cologne were set ablaze," said the communique. "At Dueseldorf several large fires were caused and an anti-aircraft position was bombed."

Air raid sirens sent London's millions to shelter again tonight after a day of "lone wolf" attacks in which the government said a small number of casualties and damage to buildings was inflicted.

De Tristan Boy Target Of Plot Foiled by FBI

Santa Rosa, Calif. — (AP) — The wealthy, socially prominent parent of 3-year-old Marc De Tristan, Jr., recent victim of a sensational kidnapping for ransom—have been singled out once again by an extortionist seeking money as the price for safety of their child.

It was learned on reliable authority today that FBI agents, working secretly through a letter sent the Count and Countess De Tristan through the Santa Rosa post office, frustrated the scheme and barely missed capturing the extortionist in a trap set in a cabbage patch near Santa Rosa.

The suspect, described as an elusive little man in a black overcoat, was reported to have shown up at the cabbage patch rendezvous late Wednesday night, snatched up a cigar box which he thought was filled with money, and vanished in the murky darkness before officers could seize him.

Before he had reached the bounds of the patch he discovered the box was filled with worthless strips of paper instead of currency, and he discarded it among the vegetable rows.

The golden-haired De Tristan boy, guarded closely by his parents at their home in the exclusive Hillsborough community 20 miles south of San Francisco, was kidnapped last Sept. 20 by Wilhelm Jakob Munlenbroich, a German alien who had visions of getting $100,000 in ransom for returning the child.

Instead, Munlenbroich was overpowered by a couple of lumberjacks in the mountains east of San Francisco and is now in San Quentin prison serving a life sentence. The child was returned home unharmed.

Greeks Advance On Inland Towns

Athens — (AP) — Blazing ruins were left in new assaults on the Albanian ports of Valona and Krionero, the R.A.F. command announced today, while Greek troops were reported battling up the coast from Palermo bay toward Chimara and tightening their lines around the inland towns of Klisura and Tepeleni.

At Valona, the R.A.F. command reported that military barracks, a gasoline dump, a motor transport park and buildings north of the town were hit during the raid, carried out yesterday. Great columns of smoke rose from the vicinity of the barracks and the gasoline stores, British pilots reported.

Direct hits were declared to have been registered on buildings in the Krionero area and fires were seen raging after the attack.

A government spokesman said last night that fascist forces had abandoned Palermo bay, on which the town of Palermo is situated, in their withdrawal toward Chimara, 10 miles up the coast. He added that the Italians had been pushed back to the outskirts of Tepeleni and that Klisura was under Greek fire.

Praise From Commander (Reports reaching Struga, Yugoslavia, on the Albanian border, said Tepeleni and Klisura, under withering fire from Greek artillery pulled into position on sledges over snow up to five feet deep, were being abandoned by the Italians.)

The Greek commander-in-Chief, General Alexander Papagos, had informed his fighting men in a general order that "your blows have placed him (the enemy) in a very difficult position. A large part of his forces are almost disbanded and without morale."

"Our enemy is shaken on the front before you and in Africa before the English. He is shaken internally. Winter is accelerating his disintegration."

Stiff Resistance "Persist in your efforts that we may crush him completely and throw him into the sea. Victory will then be ours, the best victory in our history, and it will be due to you."

The Greek high command acknowledged stiff Italian resistance in the snow-covered mountains but said 60 prisoners were captured and

U-Boats Attack Two Vessels

Raid Apparently Is Second on Convoy Within Three Days

New York — (AP) — Two ships were attacked by submarines about 450 miles west of the Irish coast today in what appeared to be the second attack on a convoy in three days.

Word of the attack was heard by MacKay radio, which picked up messages from the vessels. Both gave positions in the same area—the area that in recent months has become the graveyard of British ships carrying war materials to the beleaguered English isles.

The first report today came from the British steamer Carlton. At 7:59 a. m. (6:59 a. m. C. S. T.) she radioed that a submarine had crossed her bow and then launched a torpedo.

Thirty-six minutes later came a second report, this time from a ship which did not immediately identify itself.

"Being attacked by submarine, 55:31 north latitude, 19:25 west longitude," the message said.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil — (AP) — The Greek freighter Potaro sent an SOS today from a position about 750 miles east of Porto Alegre, Brazil.

Enemy Navy Avoids Fight, London Says

London — (AP) — British sea power consisting of battleships, a cruiser and destroyers has swept the lower Adriatic, and the battleships poured nearly 100 tons of high-explosive shells into the Albanian port of Valona, the admiralty announced today.

The raid, through the 50-mile-wide strait of Otranto, at the heel of the Italian boot, was not challenged by the Italian navy and no Italian shipping was found, the admiralty said. Valona is a vital supply port for Italian forces in southern Albania.

British commentators pounced on the failure of the Italians to engage the warships as indication that the Italian domination of the Mediterranean had been extended to the Adriatic, although the British penetrated only the lower part, as far north as Durazzo on the Albanian side and Bari on the Italian.

New evidence of British control of the Mediterranean itself was found in the intermittent, five-day bombardment of Italy's beleaguered Libyan base at Bardia where, the admiralty announced, three supply ships were sunk in a light force's penetration of the inner harbor on Tuesday.

Adriatic New Open The admiralty itself drew no conclusions from the Adriatic and Bardia operations, but the naval correspondent of the British Press association declared:

"It would seem that the Italians, driven from Taranto, and bounded again by the R. A. F. at Naples, have sought fresh bases where they hope their fleet will keep out of the way of our Mediterranean fleet."

"With the Adriatic sea now open to us, important developments may be expected."

The Adriatic raid was staged the night of Dec. 18 and the sinking of the supply ships at Bardia early the day before, according to admiralty communique.

Vice Admiral M. D. Friedman Wippl, veteran of World War operations in the Adriatic, commanded the Adriatic raiders, which appeared to have made their assault in two phases.

While a cruiser and a screening destroyer force swept the lower sea, looking fruitlessly for Italian shipping, the battleships — how many was not disclosed — plowed toward Valona.

The extent of damage at that Albanian port was not disclosed, but commentators declared that the "nearly 100 tons of high explosive shells," referred to by the admiralty, could make debris of docking facilities.

Durazzo, Albanian port to the north of Valona, has considerably inferior facilities and even these have been subjected to repeated R.A.F. bombardment.

London sources expressed belief that Italian forces in Albania were threatened with isolation worse than the encirclement of the British and French at Dunkerque because

New Ambassador to France Carries FDR Message to Petain

Washington — (AP) — Admiral William D. Leahy, newly-appointed ambassador to France, is carrying a personal note from President Roosevelt to Marshal Henri Petain, chief of the Vichy government.

Leahy sails Monday from Norfolk, Va., on a navy cruiser. Mr. Roosevelt, in telling of the message at his press conference, said it told Petain the admiral was a very old friend of his and that he felt sure Leahy would be persona grata to the marshal.

Asked why Leahy was using a naval vessel, an unusual procedure, Mr. Roosevelt remarked it was because Leahy's wife was going along and it seemed the easiest way of doing it. He agreed that the use of a merchant ship might have meant some delay. The president said he had no one in mind to succeed Leahy as governor of Puerto Rico.

A reporter inquired whether he had persuaded anyone to go to London in place of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, who has submitted his resignation, and the president said he had not asked anyone to take the position.

Two are Arraigned for Failure to Register

Detroit — (AP) — Ivan E. Fort, 27, and Kenneth H. Ives, 24, stood mute today when they were arraigned before United States Commissioner J. Stanley Hurd charged with failure to register under the selective service act. Hurd set hearings for Jan. 7.

Graduates of a Quaker school, Earlham college at Richmond, Ind., the two men described themselves as conscientious objectors and said they had sent written returns to register to their draft board stating their grounds.

Little Damage As Quake Rocks Eastern States

Buildings Shaken in New England; Many Are Thrown From Beds

Washington — (AP) — President Roosevelt told reporters today he did not know whether he might try to arrange for development of the St. Lawrence waterway by a joint agreement with Canada rather than through a treaty.

In response to a question, he said he had not looked into it.

Washington — (AP) — Asserting that war had broken the deadlock on proposed St. Lawrence Great Lakes seaway development, Representative Pittenger (R-Minn.) warned opponents of the plan they must now guard against adverse activities of its opponents.

"Since the announcement by President Roosevelt at Detroit, Mich., Dec. 5 that he was 'preparing to press for the immediate construction of the project,' the enemies of the seaway have been active," Pittenger declared in remarks placed in the congressional record.

"They are well known, and so are their motives. Their arguments have been refuted many times. They place their own selfish interests above the public welfare."

Pittenger said had the development taken place under a treaty with Canada calling for a 27-foot channel from the great lakes to the Atlantic ocean—a treaty which the United States senate failed to ratify in 1934—this country "could now build ships in great lakes ports for ocean traffic and new shipyards would be built at various points."

"With the need for electric power in connection with our national defense program, and the advantages of having ocean going boats travel from the great lakes to the Atlantic ocean, friends of the seaway can more than justify their support of the treaty," the congressman declared.

"The proponents of the seaway have reason for gratification in the announcement made Dec. 12 that the administration will take steps to build the seaway without asking for senate ratification of a treaty."

He said that if legislation rather than a treaty method were to be followed, action by the next congress would become "all important—votes will count in both houses and a majority is all that is needed."

"In view of the activities of adverse interests, now is the time for its friends to get busy," he urged. "The American people must also take a hand in the fight. Public opinion should be aroused."

Catholic Study Club Has Party

Clintonville — The December meeting of the Catholic Women's Study club Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Anton Bohr was in the form of a Christmas party. A 6:30 supper was served to about thirty-five members and guests by a committee of twelve with Mrs. L. A. Heuer as chairman.

The program included the scripture reading by Mrs. John Fralich; the response to roll, call and Christmas verses; the lesson on "The Real Presence, Part 3—the Fulfillment," given by Mrs. Frances Higgins; an article from the Catholic Digest read by Mrs. C. R. Kant about "The Life and Work of Sister Hummel."

A one-act play, "Grandma's Old-Fashioned Christmas," was presented by a cast including Mrs. Carl Schlinger as grandma, Mesdames Almada Kinsman, Clarence Gueller, Frank Joswiak, Fred Funelle, George Kort, Carl Zoch and E. K. Bard. The evening closed with the distribution of Christmas gifts by 'grandma'.

The Clintonville Lions club held its weekly dinner Tuesday evening at Hotel Marston. Motion pictures of national league football games were shown after the meal.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lyon have moved from W. Third street to the Herbera Meidam residence on N. Twelfth street.

Central Circle of the Congregational Dorcas society entertained members and guests at a Christmas party Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Martin Falk on W. Third street. Christmas readings were given by Mrs. Anna Johnson and Mrs. Douglas Nelson. Several contests were conducted by Mrs. Earl Smith, the winners in these being Mrs. W. E. Schilling and Mrs. Joseph Leyrer. The afternoon closed with the serving of a luncheon by about 25 by the committee in charge.

The Leisure Hour club was entertained at a Christmas party by Mrs. Arthur Schewe Wednesday afternoon at her home on Hemlock street. Two tables of bridge were in play with honors awarded to Mrs. Joe Zehren, Mrs. Edwin Hanger and Mrs. Arthur Metzdorf. Gifts were exchanged and a luncheon was served by the hostess.

Mrs. Donald Russell was hostess to her club at a dessert-bridge Wednesday afternoon at her home on 3rd street. Two tables of contract were played with Mrs. Elmer Lang and Mrs. B. G. Donley receiving the prizes. The affair was in the form of a Christmas party and gifts were exchanged.

Make-Up on, Then Off as Cast Misses Cue Because of Lights

The cast of "Come, Let Us Adore Him," Curtain Call's Christmas production, spent most of the noon hour Thursday making up for the play, got all ready for the curtain and then... the lights went out. But that wasn't the worst part of it. Everyone was hoping the outage would be brief and that the play could be presented with only a short delay. But the lights stayed out about 15 minutes, past curtain time. So the cast took off all the make-up to get ready for classes and then... the lights went on.

So, the cast was scheduled to go through the whole business again this afternoon to present the drama, which is the most ambitious production the club has undertaken. It is written in dramatic verse and includes special choral numbers. Miss Ruth McKenna, head of the speech department, is the director.

Greeks Spare Enemy Sentry

Cold Figure Gives Comfort to Own Men, Officer Says

BY J. WES GALLAGHER
With the Greek army on the northern Albanian front—(AP)—A shivering Italian sentry of Bersaglieri crept furtively about an icy ledge as a zero wind whipped his coat about his legs.

"We could kill him if we wished," a Greek officer at my elbow observed.

I turned away from my peephole in the observation post in one of the advanced trenches on this front.

In this sector the fighting has reverted for the time being to World-war-type trench warfare because of the terrific cold and the heavy snows.

A short distance ahead of me was a mountain where thousands of Italians are entrenched with a big assortment of artillery.

Behind me was a shell-riddled village; on the right a windswept lake; on the left, the mountains held by the Greeks.

The sky was lead-grey, flecked with snow flurries.

Trench mortar bombs thudded wickedly. Overhead, there was the crack of shrapnel shells.

Occasionally our post shook from the burst of six-inch shells nearby. The Italian sentry was a joke to the Greeks. He moved carefully. A burst from a Greek rifle would have finished him in a minute.

"There is no use killing him," the Greek officer, tall and tanned, explained. "He cannot see anything, and every time one of our men feels cold all he has to do for comfort is look at the Italian sentry."

Buckner Is Released From Federal Prison

Lewistown, Pa. — (AP) — William P. Buckner, 32-year-old Broadway playboy, was released from federal penitentiary on parole today and disappeared with his parents for an unknown destination.

Buckner served nine months of a two-year sentence on fraud and conspiracy charges in connection with the manipulation of defaulted Philippine railway bonds.

Prison authorities said Buckner's parents drove an eight-year-old automobile to a side entrance of the penitentiary this morning and whisked him away to a Lewistown inn. There, Buckner took the wheel of another automobile and sped away.

Italian Reversals Are Boon to Isle Defense

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE
New York — (AP) — The allied victories over Mussolini in the Mediterranean theater should prove a godsend to Britain as defensive preparation for the expected Nazi attempts to invade England.

This threat of invasion is described by British Premier Churchill as his country's "supreme danger."

There can be no doubt of the accuracy of that characterization.

Britain probably is facing her greatest trial by sword since the war began. It will be inaugurated by a blood-burst of Nazi bombing such as we haven't seen before.

German success could mean little less than the death of England and the establishment of Hitler's German-ruled "new order."

The Italian debacles in the Egyptian and Greco-Albanian fighting, however, have strengthened Britain's hand. Herr Hitler has in all likelihood been deprived of any worthwhile support from Mussolini during the critical period of the invasion effort. By that same token the British will be able to withdraw warships and warplanes from the Mediterranean if necessary for protection of the mother country.

Help which Hitler is reported today to be giving his partner in the Albanian mess can hardly alter the position greatly before the time of the attempted invasion. The damage cannot be repaired quickly. And the more aid the Nazi chief gives his unhappy colleague, the better for Britain, since the fuhrer needs every ounce of strength he can muster for his dangerous experiments on the English channel.

Blow to Hitler
The collapse of the Italian offensives must be a grievous blow to Herr Hitler. Without doubt he had been banking that while he was making his supreme effort to hurl an army up onto English soil out of the channel, the Duce would be tying the British in knots in the Greco-Albanian mountains and the hot winds of the Sahara have carried those hopes away.

Pending the Hitlerian assault on England, the allies will continue their effort to knock Mussolini clean out of the war. Complete defeat of Italy isn't impossible, though the time is short before Hitler will strike, and he may be expected to hurry his drive in order to divert the allies from the chase.

The Anglo-Allied position now is excellent to crack all Italy's African possessions wide open. The British have the perfect strategic naval and air base at Crete—handed them as a gift through Mussolini's invasion of Greece; the main fascist army in Africa (that of Marshal Graziani in Libya) already is terribly crippled and is fighting a losing battle; the British blockade has virtually severed water communications between Italy and all her colonies.

May Be Feeler
Indications are that the allies intend to take full advantage of this situation. British raids into Italy's east African territory quite likely are feelers in preparation for larger operations.

The fascist forces, being cut off from reinforcements and supplies, are in an unenviable position. In this connection a British communiqué regarding a raid on El Wak reports that "the Italian commander at El Wak, learning Dec. 15 that an attack was possible, fled by mule cart, causing despondency among those remaining."

An important and dramatic feature of the whole situation is that at long last little Emperor Haile Selassie has got a rebellion started in his Ethiopian kingdom against his Italian masters. The frail king of kings and conquering lion of Judah is said to be leading the revolt himself in an effort to retrieve the throne which Mussolini tore from him in 1936.

The British are aiding the Negus and say that the revolution appears to be making progress. Success would rock Mussolini's African empire.

One shudders to think of the revenge which may be exacted on the Italian troops if the wild tribesmen of Ethiopia can take very terrible forms.

Harley-Davidson Co. Votes to Pay Bonus

Milwaukee — (AP) — Walter Davidson, president of Harley-Davidson Motor company, said today that the board of directors had authorized a 5 per cent bonus to all employees.

The 1,700 employees will receive approximately $107,000 between Christmas and New Year's. The bonus was fixed on salary earnings during a 12-month pay period.

Milwaukee — (AP) — The Globe Steel Tube company distributed a Christmas bonus of approximately $125,000 to its employees today. W. C. Buchanan, company president, announced. The payments aggregated 10 per cent of the company's 1940 earnings.

Surplus Commodities Will be Distributed

The surplus commodities store room of the Outagamie county public welfare department at the intersection of Washington and Morrison streets will be open Monday and Tuesday.

The opening hours are from 9 to 12 in the morning and from 1:30 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Fresh fruits will be distributed.

Catholic Schools of City End Week With Christmas Programs

To the words and music of Christmas carols, the city's Catholic grade schools ended classes today for a 2-week Christmas vacation. The parochial schools will re-open Monday, Jan. 6.

At St. Joseph, the program this afternoon opened with a march, "Christmas Night." Patricia Bruso was the pianist, with classmates playing violins, mandolins, and other instruments. The school children then sang "Heaven Upon Us Smiled," with Joan Tillman as the pianist.

Students of the ninth grade presented a play, "The First Christmas." Members of the cast were Norman Dengel, Kenneth Schultz, Earl Christensen, Carl Schaar, August Chiavoretti, William Wenzel, Arthur Tiesling, Joan Wettengel, Gertrude Grishaber, Betty Hollenback, Margaret Mueller, Mildred Nussbaum, Betty Reider, Bernice Piette, Rosamond Terry, Joan Gage, and Joseph Hager.

Gilbert Walsh sang "Star of the East," accompanied by Joan Tillman. The program closed with the playing of "A Christmas Fantasy" and the distribution of gifts donated by the Christian Mothers society.

The St. Theresa school opened its program with the singing of "Angels We Have Heard on High." The seventh grade presented a Christmas pageant and the school sang, "The First Noel." The first grade presented "Christmas Lesson." Patrick Murphy presented a guitar solo and Mary Murphy entertained with a tap dance.

The St. Theresa seventh grade presented a pantomime, "Silent Night." The program closed with the distribution of candy and gifts.

On "Amateur Program"
Students in the third grade of St. Mary's school appeared on an "amateur program" during the Christmas party this afternoon. The fourth grade sang Christmas carols, heard readings, and gave a pantomime of Christmas gospels. The sixth grade presented the play, "Emmanuel." The seventh grade held a Christmas party Thursday afternoon at which games were played and gifts exchanged.

The St. Mary's sixth grade was host to the fifth grade pupils at a Christmas party at which the singing of Christmas carols was a feature. The second and eighth grades at the school sang Christmas songs and exchanged gifts this afternoon.

More than 200 people were present as students of Sacred Heart school gave a Christmas program last Sunday. Students who presented instrumental numbers on the program were Jean Knabenbauer, Elaine Giesbers, Mary Lou McGilgan, Barbara Krabbe, Betty Mae Bartlein, Beverly Stadler, Joyce DeGuire, Esther Trunk, and Madeleine Dishno. Pupils of the first, second, third, and fourth grades participated and each grade presented a number on the program.

Sentenced in Slaying, Faces Second Charge

Milwaukee — (AP) — William Walker, 68, was sentenced to 14 to 25 years, imprisonment yesterday after a municipal jury convicted him of second degree murder in the shooting of Mrs. Ollie Coker, 64.

The prosecuting attorney said, Walker would be brought to trial soon on a charge of assault with intent to kill Mrs. Lillie McLucas, 45, a daughter of Mrs. Coker.

Mrs. Coker was killed and her daughter wounded in a shooting on Oct. 19.

To Buy Freight Cars

Chicago — (AP) — The Chicago and North Western Railway has asked for bids on 1,700 freight cars, R. L. Williams, chief executive officer, announced yesterday.

Child Returning Home Alone From War-Stricken Countries

Lisbon, Portugal — (AP) — Five and one-half year old Axel Gorm Andersen of New York, homeward bound from the wars, thinks of British and German airmen as "air cowboys."

Traveling on his own, with the aid of tags hung around his neck, one "addressing" him to his father, Axel Andersen of Woodside, Queensborough, New York city, the little tow-headed boy arrived by air today. The Red Cross will put him aboard the S. S. Siboney.

Axel was visiting his grandparents on the outskirts of Trondheim when Germany invaded and occupied Norway, starting April 9.

He was sent alone to Petsamo, Finland, in August to take the American transport American Legion with other refugees from Scandinavia but missed the boat by a day. Finally, passage through Germany by train and plane to Spain and Portugal was arranged through the Red Cross.

He speaks only Norwegian, except for such words as "cowboy" and "movies," and his hair kept falling over his blue eyes as he talked of his adventures. He has planned his own career—to be a cowboy and "ride and shoot."

He can't understand why grandpa and grandma and his aunt wouldn't let him watch the air battles over Trondheim but always hustled him into shelter.

"I'm not afraid of planes," he said.

He insists he can tell British planes from German planes by the sound of motors and he made the noises to prove it.

On the plane ride to Lisbon, the child sat beside the German Luftwaffe pilots most of the way and they gave him a present for his "help in piloting the plane."

War Situation Today

British Warships in Attack On Fascist Port on Adriatic

British warships, boldly sailing up the Adriatic sea past the "heel" of the Italian boot, were reported by the London admiralty today to have thundered nearly 100 tons of shells into the vital fascist port of Valona, on the Albanian coast.

London quarters said Italy's failure to command the lower Adriatic left fascist troops in Albania threatened with isolation worse than the encirclement of the British and French at Dunkerque, climaxing the battle of Flanders last spring.

An R. A. F. communiqué from Cairo reported "great damage" inflicted in an aerial raid Wednesday night on Derna, Italian coastal base 175 miles inside Libya.

British commentators seized on the naval shelling of Valona and the British fleets accompanying sweep through the lower Adriatic, unchallenged by the Italian fleet, as proof that British domination of the Mediterranean has now been extended into the Adriatic—into Italy's "home waters."

Big guns boomed, too, in the 12-day-old battle of North Africa. Premier Mussolini's high command reporting heavy artillery fire exchanged in the Bardia sector in Libya, where an estimated 20,000 fascist troops are under siege.

British naval units, lying off Bardia, bombarded the town while General Sir Archibald P. Wavell's desert troops were reported tightening the trap on the Italians in the frontier post, strongly protected by a network of tank traps, land mines and machine-gun emplacements.

The British admiralty said that light naval units sank three Italian supply ships off Bardia and that "extensive fires have been burning in the town since Dec. 15," assuming "very large proportions" under bombardment by land and sea.

In the unceasing air war between England and Germany, R. A. F. bombers flew through bad weather during the night to attack "several targets" in the rich industrial Ruhr and in western Germany, the London air ministry announced.

Four heavy bomb explosions were reported by R. A. F. fliers in a raid on Essen, site of the great Krupp armament works, while other R. A. F. planes flew low over the Rhine-land city of Bonn and set "one very large fire."

Power stations, railway junctions, oil plants and anti-aircraft stations were listed as targets of an apparently large-scale night of attacks by the R. A. F.

While British battleships pounded Valona, described by the admiralty as a main supply port of the Italian army in southern Albania, a force of cruisers and destroyers "swept the Adriatic sea as far north as Bari and Durazzo" without encountering "enemy shipping," it was announced.

On the Greek war front, a government spokesman in Athens said that the hard-pressed Italians were retreating up the Albanian coast road from Palermo bay toward Chimara, 10 miles north, and that the Greeks were tightening their grip on the strategic inland mountain towns of Klisura and Tepeleni.

Yugoslav frontier dispatches said Mussolini's legions were withdrawing from both points under a withering fire from Greek artillery holed on sledges over five-foot snowdrifts in the mountains.

Six hundred Italians were reported captured in an unspecified area.

Act to Improve County Asylum Conditions

Madison — (AP) — The Dane county board took steps yesterday to improve conditions at the county asylum at Verona as a result of recent criticism by several supervisors. The board approved construction of an infirmary and employees dormitory, hiring of a nurse and three others on the staff, wage increases for employees and adoption of a new record system to centralize responsibility at the institution.

Mrs. Catherine O'Donnell Dies at Daughter's Home

Weyauwega — Mrs. Catherine Burke O'Donnell, 63, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Beyer at Fish Creek Thursday morning. Mrs. O'Donnell was born in Weyauwega on Nov. 1, 1877. She was married to James O'Donnell who preceded her in death one year ago. The O'Donnells lived in this city until 10 years ago when they moved to Milwaukee. Three years ago they went to Fish Creek to live with their daughter.

Mrs. O'Donnell was confined to her bed for the last seven weeks. Funeral services will be held Saturday from the Catholic church in Fish Creek and the body will be brought to Oakwood cemetery, Weyauwega, for burial. Services at the grave will be conducted by the Rev. L. D. Krembs of Waupaca. Royal Neighbors of Weyauwega of which she was a member will serve a dinner at the home of Mrs. George Haire after the funeral.

Balance in War Rests With America's Shipment of Arms

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—People are asking what it is that William S. Knudsen describes as the "terrible urgency" of the situation. Putting it in my own words, the substance of it as I gather it here is about as follows:

Hitler is expected to make his supreme effort to knock England out of the war just as soon as the weather permits. No one knows exactly when this will be but it probably will be in the late winter or early spring. One official puts it as roughly ninety days away.

This is understood as Hitler's short cut to win the war. England is the heart of the resistance and must be broken if Germany is to win. Hitler must strike in the near future because by early summer American production will really begin to count. From then on Britain will become increasingly stronger. The longer Hitler delays, the more difficult his task will become. His one chance is to beat American-made planes, ships and munitions to the firing line.

England has made the best preparations she can for this crisis. But her best is not enough to be completely reassuring. Her own production is about at its peak. Transportation congestion, temporary power interruptions, loss of machine-tool facilities, and bomb damage generally, are not laughed off as of no matter. Steady loss of shipping is endangering England's lines of supply from outside.

England must hold during the expected attack or the war is over with a German victory as complete as the conquest of France.

The balance probably rests with the amount of war material which can be shipped from the United States during the next few weeks.

That is the point. Help is needed now. Speedup of production cannot take place quickly enough to accelerate by very much the flow of supplies during the next few weeks.

If there is to be any such increase as apparently is needed, it will have to come first by our turning over additional shipping and second by turning over part of our own military stocks. President Roosevelt seemed to be preparing the way for such action when he said at his press conference this week that planes and war materials were more useful to our defense if placed in British hands now than if kept in storage here.

If Nazis Beat England, U. S. Is Left Alone

The war between Germany and Britain is going to a showdown. If Germany knocks England out, then the United States is left alone still unable to defend both north and south America on two ocean fronts. Everything else will be in the hands of the axis combination—Europe, Asia and Africa, and control of the sea routes and strategic bases in those areas.

Collect $1,045 For Red Cross

Community Total at Clintonville 67 Pct. Ahead of Last Year

Clintonville—A complete report on the Red Cross roll call, which closed here recently, shows that a total of $1,044.80 was collected in this community, an increase of 67 per cent over last year. Memberships increased from 409 last year to 696 for 1940, an increase of 70 per cent. Francis M. Higgins, roll call chairman, was assisted by Mrs. David Ellis, rural roll call chairman, and more than one hundred volunteer workers. One-half of all funds collected for memberships and other contributions will remain here to be used by the Clintonville Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Clintonville youngsters will enjoy a visit from Santa Claus on Saturday, Dec. 21, when he will arrive here by airplane. At 10 o'clock in the morning he will fly over the city and drop 200 parachutes bearing candy and toys for the little girls and boys. These are to land in the baseball park, so that there will be no danger of the children being hit by cars while hunting for the gifts from the sky. Another 200 parachutes will be dropped at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. At 4 o'clock Santa Claus will hand out 2,500 bags of candy to children from his throne at the corner of Eighth Place and S. Main street. The visit of Santa Claus with his gifts has been arranged by the Clintonville Association of Commerce.

Harold Darnell and Fred Chapel will hold a formal opening of their new and modernized Clintonville Electric shop at 122 S. Main street on Saturday, Dec. 21. The store has been completely renovated since it was destroyed by fire on Oct. 8.

The circulation department of the Appleton Post-Crescent is represented in Clintonville by James Bohr, 46 Main street. Orders for subscriptions may be left with him. Subscribers missed by carrier should call Mr. Bohr, telephone 527, before 7 p. m.

They tell this one about Private "Speedy" Vorpal. While his group was advancing on an attack problem the rest period was blown. There is a 10-minute rest in each hour of drill. Private Vorpal immediately broke formation and when reminded of the situation by Private Frank Brueggeman he calmly asked, "Don't they rest in the enemy camps, too?"

According to army rules and regulations no private can talk back or argue with any corporal or sergeant. Private "Slim" Skell gets around this, however, by talking in his sleep and really "lacing it to them" in his nocturnal mutterings.

The animals in this part of the country really get hungry. A few weeks ago goats ate the insulation off the communications wires connected with regimental headquarters and recently the cows were discovered very placidly chewing up the paper machine gun targets. This is pen range country. All live stock is allowed to run loose while the houses and yards are fenced in.

That Rain Again

Corporal Charley Muench tells us that he thinks all the rain and mud in the country have been de-toured to Louisiana in general, Camp Beauregard in particular, and his tent more specifically. All the rain has wet the wood and fire building is difficult. Private "Cooly" Couillard is pretty good at getting one started despite the handicap of wet wood and has been granted a degree of "Professor of Fireology" by squad members in the area of his tent. Sergeant Green must have some device for finding the tents with fires in them. All we have to do to find Bob is to look for the tent with the biggest fire and there he will be, huddled around the stove, soaking up heat.

The rain doesn't cause much comment any more; in fact, there is discussion as to the when, why and wherefore when it doesn't rain, especially on weekends.

Private Bob "Barber" Arndt, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, returned to the street in a surprise visit. He is still confined to the hospital for a while, getting a chance to rest up before returning to active duty. He is a little bit weak and pale from the encounter but still the same cheery "Barber."

Our other tonsorial artist, Larry Gilkey, reports business as extremely good. He tells us that he has customers from all over the regiment now that the boys are getting ready for Christmas fur-loughs. Private Eddie Polzin asked what he had to do to get his name in the paper, so here it is.

Greenville Sodality Will Elect Officers

Greenville—The Young Ladies' Sodality will hold its annual meeting Sunday at St. Mary's Catholic church, Greenville. New officers will be elected, and new members will be received. The present officers are Miss Cedella Becher, president, and Miss Mildred Griesbach, secretary and treasurer.

Carol Schroeder is remodeling and modernizing his barn. He is installing new dairy equipment, and his cold storage is being remodeled to be used for hog and hen house. In the spring an addition will be built to the barn, and a new roof will be put on.

Sergeants Throw Shoes Until Guard Comes, Puts Lights Out

Camp Beauregard, La.—A heavy fog shrouded the entire area Friday (Dec. 13) morning and later developed into a fine rain which was annoying because it was just heavy enough to enforce the wearing of raincoats which were very warm for the day. Pistols were issued before we went out to drill in preparation for instruction in the weapon. Proper grip of the pistol, stance and the safeties of the weapons were taught by Sergeant Bob Green.

As we stood shivering in the chilly wind while waiting for the inspection Saturday morning, some one asked Corporal Roy Sather if he had his "red flannels" on. Roy calmly replied, "Only one pair." The government issue is four sets. Lieutenant Bill Page should have enough tobacco to keep him going for "about a week," according to his statement. He has received six large packages of his favorite brand as a Christmas gift.

Members of Sergeant Jack Brewer's tent are thinking about buying him a fire truck for Christmas, due to Jack's part in the extinguishing of a large grass fire a few days ago. Jack takes the imitations of fire whistles and sirens, with which he is greeted as he walks down the street, with a big smile. He and Sergeant DeNoble have also formed a two-man band, furnishing music at all hours. It is reported that their music is so hot that even the stoves that he tore his pipes in shame.

Corporals John Kuchlenbecher and John Salm were commenting on letters they had received and as the talk continued, "He said that in mine, too," was repeated frequently. They finally compared the letters and found them to be identical. They both agree that it was one way for the writer to save time. As these notes were gathered Corporal Salm's squad was also busy.

Stripping the States to the Bone

By a divided court the Federal Power Commission was sustained in its ruling that the Appalachian Electric Power Company must accept a federal license for its dam on the New river in Virginia.

Virginia is far away. And most of us never heard of the New river. Indeed not many Virginians know of the New river either.

But as in many little cases a big principle was involved. And the importance of that principle might be observed if we listened to the argument at the supreme court since 41 of our states, anxiously aware of the threat to their control of water power development on their own streams, urged the highest court to knock out the Federal Power Commission in its hungry, over-reaching for control of streams that haven't any more to do with navigation or interstate commerce than a thunder shower.

But a majority of the court ruled, first, that the river was navigable and second, that the Federal Power had jurisdiction upon and over it.

Long ago the War Department, to control and effectively strengthen the country's defenses, took over the rulership of "navigable" streams. And what is a navigable stream? That was a critical point involved at Washington. The supreme court held that navigability did not relate to obstacles, falls and rapids but only volume of water, gradients and regularity of flow. And having so held, it necessarily followed that any stream is navigable even if a row boat cannot be launched upon it so long as such row boat might be launched upon it after the government had spent some enormous sum of money widening and deepening it.

Actually that is the decision. And just as actually there is left to the states nothing more than the meadow brooks.

For practical purposes the states are again shorn of their powers in order to further fatten the glutton government of the United States. And those who build these dams, like the one in Virginia, are required to enter into a contract with the government of the United States, instead of the state government involved, giving the federalists the authority to repurchase the dam at the end of the license period and conferring upon the national government the right to regulate rates, services and securities while the state power commissions are given the palm in the face and forced back into a closet.

Farther and farther do these decisions take us from safe moorings. Farther and farther our government recedes from the people, going from Madison to Washington. Always there is less likelihood that attention will be paid to the wishes of local communities in respect to strictly local questions.

It is of little or no importance to the utility involved. The federal licensing period is 50 years, that of most states only half as much, and this is a strict advantage to the utility. But the trend is even farther away than ever from efficient government, from government of the people, to blind and dumb government as determined on Washington golf courses by an array of little bureaucrats that know nothing of the problems, wishes or ambitions of the interested and affected community and care less.

A Presidential Veto

The Logan-Walter bill, which the President vetoed, was aimed at only one object, the preservation of "our way of life,"—that is, the American system of democracy.

Putting it in the language of the day this bill attempted to make administrators out of bureaucrats instead of permitting them to become gauleiters. And yet the veto, under the circumstances, and the President's survey of the future, was correct.

As we go to war, or as we take steps which may make war quite inevitable, we need gauleiters just as much as Hitler does, and there is no time, after orders are given or hurried decisions made, to bother with anything so remote as justice.

The Governor Moves to Milwaukee

Governor Heil exhibited the sure shrewdness of the politician when he delayed arrangements for a Milwaukee branch of the governor's office until after the November vote-counting was completed. To judge from the acutely inconclusive character of his reelection plurality, the governor did well to hide this extraordinary project in secrecy until the Milwaukee office was leased, furnished and ready for occupancy.

The governor announces that he will be available for callers at his Milwaukee executive office on Mondays and Fridays. That means, we discern, that he will be on the job in Madison on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays only, for he is almost never at his capitol desk on Saturdays.

It seems that the governor has a completely mistaken concept of his duties and function as governor, although he didn't make that so clear during his recent campaign. The governor is the responsible executive head of the administrative machinery of the state. By his own campaign speeches, he has characterized that state government as the biggest single business in Wisconsin, one that required "a good manager." It follows then that the biggest business in the state needs a full-time manager, that it cannot be successfully directed by a man who drops in on only three days of the week.

It is true that the state has certain minor branches in Milwaukee. But the central state government is at Madison, and if there is anybody who believes that it needs skilled, experienced and conscientious direction, it is Mr. Heil—if his campaign addresses are to be believed.

The governor says that a considerable part of the population of the state lives in Milwaukee, that many citizens cannot afford to come to Madison to see him.

But is the governor's job one of interviewing constituents only? Must the department of agriculture, the public service commission, the insurance department, tax commission, and the scores of others in the capitol, which daily find problems demanding the governor's attention wait until he has finished visiting his Milwaukee friends before they can put those matters of state before him?

To the people of Appleton and Wausau Milwaukee is as distant as is Madison. A majority of the people of Wisconsin can not afford a trip to either community when they want to see the governor. But they can write, as they always have written to governors who served before Mr. Heil.

Mr. Heil's reasoning could be carried out to ridiculous consequences. He might set up a branch office in Superior, others at Eau Claire, Wisconsin Rapids and Platteville. Or Mr. Roosevelt might arrange for an office in Chicago.

The seat of the state government is at Madison, and it is there the governor belongs. A governor who decides otherwise is going to be suspected of putting his personal convenience above the needs of the state he was elected to serve.

The Poor Spies

Some shambling figures have been walking up the scaffold in the cold and mist of an English morning. All hope gone, they have stood as resolutely as possible while a rope was put around their neck, a churchman spoke a prayer, the drums rolled, and the trap sprung them into eternity.

Despite their reprehensible trade they were pitiful figures, for they were all deceived. They were sent into England to gather information and then to get into touch with landing parties and help in the complicated business of liaison.

But the German high command suddenly altered its plans after the spies had crossed the channel. Individuals may occasionally get across where an army doesn't even dare to try. But individuals cannot get back again.

And so, instead of a wine banquet on the always promised eve of victory they walked dejectedly in the chill of the morning to their death. And no one sighed or drops a tear which is a good omen that human nature revolts against the fellows who, under pretense of friendship and affection, worm themselves into a country only to point out to the foe how best it may be destroyed.

Opinions of Others

A CAMERAMAN'S DIARY

Although it concerned what had happened more than three-quarters of a century before, William H. Jackson wasn't stumped by the question: "What were you doing on the morning of Jan. 20, 1863?" He and other members of the Twelfth Regiment of the Second Vermont Brigade of the Union army were marching to Wolf Run Shoals from Fairfax Court House, which they left at 7 a. m. Also, he knew that nine days later he was paid off up to the first of the previous November, receiving $31.60, part of which he used on the following day on a bootbuying excursion to Alexandria. Thus the dead of American photographers was able to proceed and produce a vivid autobiography, "Time Exposure," which gives immensely from the fact that there is a skeleton of detailed accuracy supporting an interesting story.

Mr. Jackson was not performing any marvel of memory. Simply, he kept a diary. He began it in his youth, and was faithful to it from then on. When it came time to tell the story of his life, of his adventures in the west and elsewhere, of his making the photographs which convinced the nation that the reysers and other wonders of the Yellowstone weren't just tall tales of travelers, he had the basic material conveniently at hand. There was no "I think . . ." and "That happened about . . ." and "The way it seem to me now . . ."

Not every one will publish an autobiography at the age of 97, or even earlier, but it must have been grand fun for Mr. Jackson to go back and relive all those happenings, and any one might share that pleasure. A wellkept journal becomes a good book about that most fascinating of all subjects, the writer's self. It is a dispute settler, a reminiscence stirrer, an aid and a comfort. It may even serve to tone down a puffed figure. Every man who is his own Peeps will provide pleasure for himself, and possibly benefit or entertain later comers.—New York Sun.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Washington—A lot has been written about Washington lobbies, but sometimes the most potent lobby is that conducted by beautiful women. Just at present a powerful one-lady lobby is being staged by Mrs. Lionel Atwill, wife of the famous actor and ex-wife of Douglas MacArthur, former U. S. Chief of Staff.

Mrs. Atwill is promoting the appointment of Henry Fountain Ashurst, defeated Senator from Arizona, as a judge on the court of claims. This is a popular cause, since Ashurst is one of the most popular men in the senate; and Mrs. Atwill in turn is one of the most popular ladies in Washington.

However, Mrs. Atwill is bucking the president of the United States, who appointed Warren Madden, former head of the labor relations board, to the court of claims. When his name was sent to the senate, the chivalrous Ashurst immediately asked that his colleagues confirm the appointment. But Senator Vandenberg of Michigan objected.

A lot of Democrats disagree with Vandenberg most of the time, but this time they silently applauded. The other day, however, patient Senator Barkley, administration leader of the senate, again asked approval of Madden's appointment, but again Vandenberg objected. Barkley pleaded with him, but the senator from Michigan remained obdurate.

Afterward, Barkley remarked to Mrs. Atwill: "Listen, Mickey Mouse, I thought I saw two bright brown eyes up in the senate gallery when Vandenberg objected, and I think I know who is opposing me in getting Madden confirmed."

Sensor Barkley was only half right. Mrs. Atwill had been extremely active against Madden. She even helped secure 86 senate signatures for Ashurst's appointment to the court of claims. But when she thanked Senator Vandenberg for his efforts, that very frank gentleman replied:

"My opposition is not entirely chivalry, Louise. I've got a big group of industrial leaders in Michigan who are bitterly opposed to Madden's decision on the labor board. The last thing they want is to see him on the court of claims."

FARM TRENDS

The hearings of the special house committee investigating farm migrancy, under the chairmanship of California's kindly Representative John Tolan, deserve a lot more attention than they have received.

Leading experts have disclosed some extremely significant facts concerning agricultural trends that are affecting the lives of millions and the future of the United States. Yet Tolan has had a tough time keeping his committee going.

Lack of public interest due to the European war has played into the hands of elements who oppose doing anything drastic about the migrant problem, among them the California Chamber of Commerce and the Associated Farmers. These forces have persistently tried to block Tolan's inquiry by cutting off his funds.

Professor Paul S. Taylor of the University of California told the committee of three significant trends:

BIG BUSINESS FARMING

1. Rapid enlargement of farms under a single operator. In a survey last summer in the Middle West he found one 9,000-acre grain and livestock farm in Ohio. At the same time, 25,000 tenant farmers were unable to obtain farms.

2. Spread of farm management services for absentee owners, such as business men. Already there are several professional societies of men in this field.

3. Wholesale elimination of farm labor through mechanization, which is rapidly changing the traditional American concept of the family-sized corn belt farm.

"Our ancestors of three generations ago," Taylor warned, "found the solution for their goal of independent working farmers, secure on the land, in the land reform clauses of the Homestead Act. Today the march of mechanization and other economic forces have produced dependence and insecurity on the land for our generation. Stern necessity compels us to find our way to maintain independence and security among those who work the soil."

One solution of this problem offered the committee, by Dr. Walter E. Packard of California, was government ownership of all farm land on the same basis as forest land. "Land speculation has been a major factor in the failure of private ownership," Packard said.

Note—One of the most interesting trends reported by Prof. Taylor was that the acquisition of farms is now a "rage" among business men, who in several midwestern cities are holding weekly "farmer luncheons" to hear talks by farm management experts. According to Taylor, the business men take up farming partly as a substitute for golf and partly "as a safe place to invest funds."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

When Mrs. Roosevelt testified before the house committee on the migrant problem, Representative Frank Osmer of New Jersey couldn't keep his eyes off a brilliant diamond ring she was wearing. Osmer is an authority on precious gems, and Mrs. Roosevelt's ring is an heirloom. . . . Defense Commissioner Edward R. Stettinius, 5 feet 10 inches and very slim, is known to intimates as "Little Stet," to distinguish him from his huskier older brother. . . . According to The Republican, monthly GOP journal, thousands of letters have been received by Wendell Willkie and other party leaders "urging them to change the name of the Republican Party."

FEEDING EUROPE

No British war-time visitor has scored a bigger personal triumph than slender, scholarly Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the British Trade Union congress, who came to the United States to address the AFL convention in New Orleans. Lest anything he said be construed as propaganda, Sir Walter has assiduously avoided discussing the war.

At a private gathering, however, labor friends drew him out on Herbert Hoover's proposal to send food to Nazi-occupied Europe. Questioned about Britain's refusal to lift the blockade for this purpose, Sir Walter studied for a moment and then answered with this story:

Several months ago the British permitted a cargo of South American wheat to pass through the blockade to France. The wheat remained in France and was made into bread, but the Nazis seized an equal supply of potatoes from the French food reserve and shipped it to Germany. There the potatoes were converted into alcohol which was used as a solvent in the manufacture of smokeless powder for the German army.

"You see," explained Sir Walter, "even when they don't seize them outright, the Nazis make sure they benefit in some way from supplies sent to the occupied countries. We never know when a carload of food that gets through the blockade is coming back at us in the form of bullets."

A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington—Buried in the dispatches from Greece the other day was an item that Dodecanese Islanders residing in Greece were organizing an expedition to expel the Italians from the Aegean.

Observers in Washington who noticed it got ready to write another chapter in one of the most tangled tales in history—the story of the Dodecanese.

These islands (that's what the name means) are sometimes referred to as the "The Rose of the Aegean" and her 11 sisters.

The island of roses is Rhodes, largest of the group, which stretches almost like a breakwater off the southern Aegean coast of Turkey. The others are Astypalaia, Calymnos, Carpathos, for which the Carpathian sea is named; Cosos, Chalki, Cos, the homeland of Hippocrates, the father of medicine; Nisyros, Patmos, where St. John the Apostle is believed to have written the book of Revelations; Symi and Telos. There actually is a thirteenth, but it is no more than an islet and generally is considered a part of Leros.

People Always Greek
The history of the islands is long and complicated, stretching back into the mists of Greek mythology. The Dorian and Persian invasions; the wars with the Greek city states; the struggles against Rome; the centuries of Turkish domination; the Italian occupation in 1912 all are there, but the people always have remained Greek. Although it is no more than a pebble flip to the Turkish mainland, the islanders still refer to their neighbors as "the men of over there" as if they were folk of another hemisphere.

Periodically the inhabitants—fishermen, shepherds, farmers, traders and sailors—have found their islands over-populated and have set up their "home from home" in many parts of the world—in the United States and the Argentine, in Egypt, Australia and Greece.

In 1912 the Italians "liberated" the Dodecanese from the Turks. The people at first rejoiced but soon found they were not enjoying the self-rule they had expected.

In the secret treaty of April, 1915, Great Britain promised Italy (as part payment for coming into the war) that when peace was made, the Dodecanese would be hers to have and hold. The group that gathered at Versailles had other ideas. Among these was the delegation from the United States, and in May, 1920, the Senate passed a resolution "That it is the sense of the Senate that . . . the twelve islands of the Aegean . . . should be awarded by the peace conference to Greece."

Italy finally agreed, and a late treaty with Greece stipulated that after a year 11 of the islands would be returned and 15 years later Rhodes would be given back "provided England returns Cyprus to Greece."

Before the year was up, however, there was a change of Italian administration and not only were the islands never returned, but the Italians heaped on the Dodecanese an unforgettable insult. They expelled from his Greek Orthodox see the archbishop of Rhodes, which even the Moslem Turks had considered too drastic to be attempted.

Italy has held the Dodecanese ever since. With Great Britain occupying and fortifying Crete, which overshadows the islands on the west, they are not at present important from a standpoint of military strategy. For that reason, if for no other, an expeditionary force might have no great difficulty in expelling the Italians and once more bring home to Greece the Rose of the Aegean and her 11 sisters.

Looking Backward

25 YEARS AGO

Friday, Dec. 24, 1915

G. D. Ziegler of Appleton was elected president of the Aid Association for Lutherans at the annual meeting of the directors. Other officers included: Henry Hegner, Appleton, vice president; Albert Vockes, Appleton, treasurer; William H. Zuchlick, Appleton, secretary.

Henry Ford had abandoned his enterprise to bring the boys out of the trenches by Christmas and sailed for America aboard the Bergeforsford. He decided to leave the party which was to carry out the peace program, because of his health.

One of the most popular Christmas gifts that year among the higher priced ones, were talking machines.

10 YEARS AGO

Friday, Dec. 19, 1930

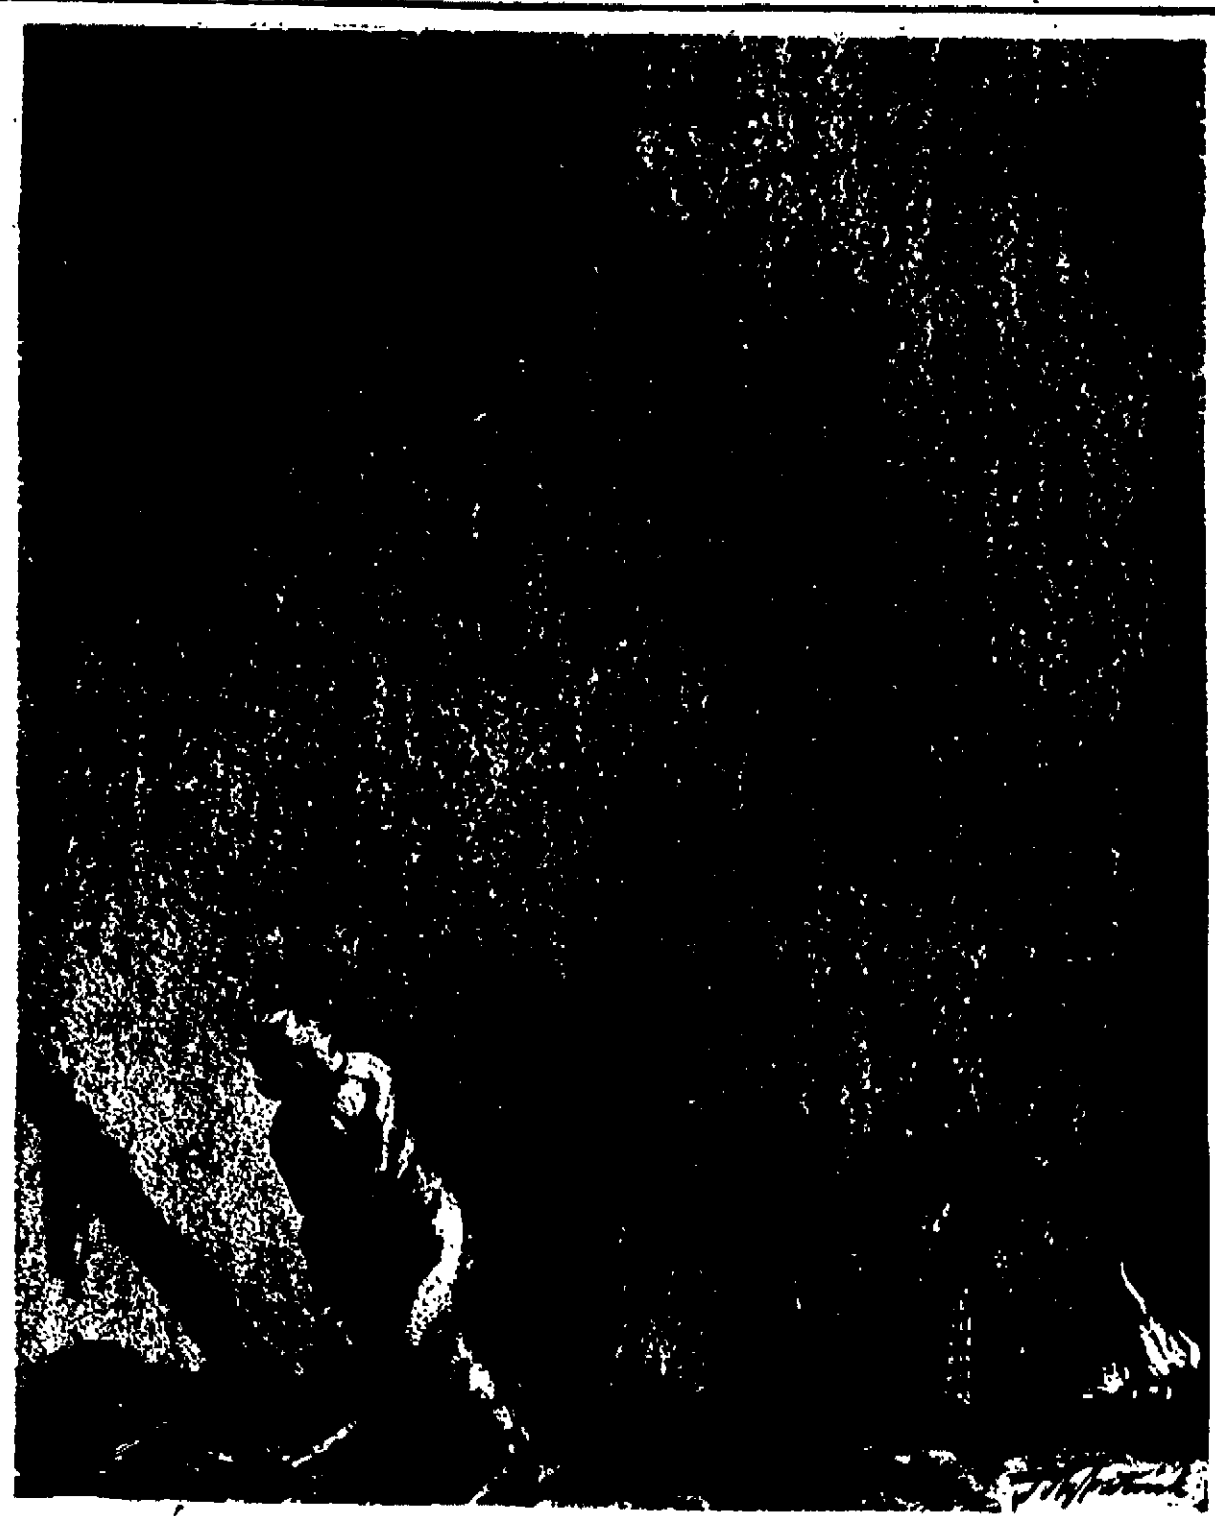

Victor Weinkauf, a student at Harvard Business school, arrived Thursday to spend the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Weinkauf, 844 E. Pacific street.

Clarence Zelle was elected chancellor commander of the Knights of Pythias.

John Staniek of the Marathon Mills team set a dizzy pace in Menasha City league bowling Thursday evening when he scored 761 on games of 231, 225 and 235.

Appleton High school cagers, coached by Joseph Shields, were to play their first Fox River Valley conference game at Manitowish Friday night. Mortell and Friebe were expected to be the only veterans in the starting lineup. Others who had shown well were Peotter, Rule, Collins and Verrier.

"Hark, the Herald Angels Sing"

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—A job which is traditionally filled with political dynamite will confront the Wisconsin state legislature when it opens its 1941 regular session under the statehouse dome on January 8.

By the terms of the state constitution, the legislature must consider a reapportionment of legislative district boundaries, an assignment which those legislative veterans who remember the 1931 fight anticipate with a decided lack of pleasure.

Wisconsin legislative districts now have a sad lack of uniformity, but because of practical political considerations and the limitations specifically expressed in the constitution, it is highly unlikely that a Republican majority will be able to improve the population apportionment.

There are many counties which have less than the 31,000 population which ought to be the average for a legislative but which have their own legislative representatives who will fight against a change. There are other counties, particularly in the industrial areas, which have populations entitling them to additional legislative representation.

Milwaukee, for example, is claiming four additional assemblymen and another state senator. But the majority leaders who remember well the obstreperous habits of the Milwaukee bloc will hesitate to give it more votes and power. Dane county wants more legislators, because of its big population growth, but does anyone seriously imagine that a Republican administration will grant that county's plea when its voters voted so overwhelmingly Progressive that they came within an ace of defeating Heil last fall?

ANOTHER LIMITATION

However, the constitution also sets forth the maximum size of each house of the legislature, and both have already attained that limit. The assembly shall consist of not more than 100 members and the senate shall consist of not more than one third the number of assemblymen.

Therefore the only way by which the administration can give those localities which enjoyed substantial increases in population a proportionate increase in legislative voice will be to cut correspondingly those areas which have failed to gain or have lost in population, a prospect which Governor Heil's Republican legislative leaders recognize with natural dread.

A further complication arises from the fact that the constitution prevents the division of counties. Small counties, therefore, can only be joined with other small counties in their entirety, and because some of them are isolated, surrounded by larger territories, that alternative is difficult and impractical.

Incidentally, the reapportionment

HEMORRHOIDAL LUMBAGO

Dictionary tell us lumbago means "rheumatic pain in the loins and the small of the back," whatever rheumatic may mean—don't try to find that in the dictionary for if you do the dictionary will just give you the run around and you'll know less about it than you do now.

Of course the dictionary explains that lumbago is derived from the Latin lumbus, which means loin. The ago, I imagine, was originally ague, loin ague. Brow argue is still a common term for neuralgia in the forehead. The dictionary gives a liberal assortment of definitions of ague—from fever to chill. So it is not so remarkable that the old timers assumed—and plenty of old timers are still in active practice—that lumbago was a bad cold settled in the back or, as the old timers called it, rheum—yes, indeed, rheum was a word which signified "catarrh, a flow" to the old, old, old timers. And that's far enough back to give you an idea how much truth or science and how much fancy or guesswork there is in a "diagnosis" of lumbago in any instance. If you are not a wide eyed child it should arouse in you enough curiosity to find out what ails you when some doctor or quack doctor under takes to treat your lumbago. It is as foolish if not foolhardy to try this or that remedy or treatment for lumbago, without reference to the nature and source of the complaint, as it is to take physic or pain-killer for belyneche regardless of the nature and source of the pain or discomfort.

There are a good many cases of so-called "functional," "postural," "uterine" or "sacro-lumbar" backache in which mechanical support by means of rigid corsets, skilful strapping with adhesive plaster, sometimes even application of a plaster-of-Paris girdle or more commonly a special wide belt applied tightly around the pelvis below the wings of the hip bones, seems to give marked relief. Sometimes such support puts an end to the complaint, especially if the fault of posture, or the abnormal strain, or the flabbiness of muscle and ligament responsible for the complaint be corrected by proper measures. But in other instances the relief the patient experiences from such support does not last long. For example, here is a case mentioned in a personal communication from a medical colleague:

"I can't understand why the first thing the average doctor suggests, when a patient complains of constant backache, is an X-ray picture. I am at a loss to explain why the profession is so blind to anal infections such as ulcerated crypts, proctitis, internal ulcerated piles, hypertrophic papillae, ulcerated polyps and fissure, as the cause of more backaches than pelvic infection and bone disease. As a current illustration there is . . . my long essay on sacral backache published in . . . where the author goes into everything thoroughly but does not even mention anal or rectal diseases. . . . One of our wealthiest women came home from a famous clinic wearing a sacro-lumbar brace. But presently her backache recurred. At the first examination she had ever had we found an infected anal crypt, excised it under local anesthesia. The patient suddenly obtained complete relief from backache, discarded the brace, and has remained perfectly well for a year or more since."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Protect the Children

When my young son had cri I had him wear a mask when he played with other children, but they made fun of it. Could not some such mask be made popular with school children, if the aid of the school nurse and teachers were engaged? (Mrs. G.E.S.)
Answer—Eventually, perhaps, but not yet. Nurses, like doctors, will need a good deal more education to make them spray consciousness. Meanwhile, it's every child for himself, so far as prevention of respiratory infection goes. Most practical and efficient mask for child or adult, layman or doctor, is the transparent Silvers mask, construction and use of which was described in this column Monday, Nov. 4.

Asthma

Your column is very helpful. Would like to know if you could send me a booklet on the cause, prevention and cure of asthma. (A.S.)
Answer—Send stamped envelope bearing your address, for pamphlet on asthma.

Children Uppermost in Minds of Good Fellows

BY F. A. W. HAMMOND
Appleton Director of Relief
To the Good Fellows of Appleton:

I am addressing my plea to you to subscribe as liberally to the Good Fellows fund as you can possibly afford to do. In making this plea, I am not thinking so much of the older people, the parents, as I am of the children—the children of those who are on relief or constitute that larger body which we think of under the classification of borderline cases. These poor youngsters have seen the parade of Santa Claus with his reindeer go down the street; they see the stores lighted up and crammed full of toys, candies and decorations—that to them, in their childish minds, means Christmas.

I can call to mind a few families who have been especially unfortunate and hard hit during this last year. One family in particular which has been compelled, through no fault of its own, but through the unfortunate circumstance of the complete physical incapacity of the father to earn a living, to come to this department for assistance. We can only give them the necessities of life—groceries, clothing, fuel and shelter—but we cannot give them the extra things that make "Christmas" for these children. You parents can readily realize what it is to a mother and father to see their children pass a Christmas without any of the extra things that bring joy and happiness to the hearts of the little ones at Christmas time.

Another family, who have always been poor, was recently burned out and not a thing left, and we had to step in and put them on their feet again. They were barely able to earn sufficient to keep body and soul together and they will have nothing with which to give their children a happy Christmas.

You all realize we are taught from childhood that Christmas is a time of happiness and rejoicing and particularly "Good Will to Men." It is you, Good Fellows, who can make these words a vital and living thing rather than just as the Good Book says "Nothing" but sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

Last year the Good Fellows Fund amounted to something over five hundred dollars and there were over two hundred baskets given out. There were, of course, in addition to this many baskets given privately of which nothing was known. We are hoping this year that the fund will reach $700 or $750 in order that the ground may be as completely covered as possible, for there were many, many cases left out last year. Hundreds of children are depending upon you for any Christmas that they may get and I cannot believe that the Good Fellows of Appleton are going to let them go without some of the good things for Christmas that will bring joy and happiness to their little hearts.

I can think of nothing that will give those of us who are able to subscribe even a little to this fund a happier Christmas than the feeling that as we sit down with our own families on Christmas to unwrap their presents and see the faces of our own children, happy and joyous because of what they have been given, that we have done what we could to bring some happiness and pleasure to some other family who without that help would be sad rather than joyous. Let us remember the great charge laid upon us and upon all mankind by the Founder of the Christian religion when near the end of His earthly career He said "The poor ye have always with you." That was a task laid upon us and now when we commemorate His birth there could be no more appropriate time to remember that charge, and to the best of our ability, discharge that obligation. All the other cities around us are making great efforts along this same line. One city I have heard of is even going so far as to canvass almost every industry and well-to-do person because they want to make sure that no one of the poor in their city and none of the children of their city shall go without a happy Christmas memory.

I feel confident that everyone in Appleton, who is able to subscribe even a little, will do what they can to make this a better and brighter Christmas for the poor of this city than it has been any other year. It is the Good Fellow Fund that is the main stay and hope of a happy Christmas for the poor and underprivileged of this city.

The Post-Crescent is most generously giving of its time and space so that no one can say later "I didn't know anything about it." Day after day, commencing last week and from now until Christmas, this space will be filled with pleas for your help. Think of the children and what this means to them, and I am sure none will be left out.

Johnson Wants U. S. Financing Of Britain Brought Into Open

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

New York City—This business of all-out American financing of British armament needs considerable clearing up. There is no definite limit to what it may cost American taxpayers. There is no definite showing either of how necessary it is relative to the necessity for effective American rearmament, with which it most certainly interferes. The public or the congress surely is entitled to be taken at least part way into the confidence now rigidly confined to closely-guarded conversations between Mr. Churchill's staff and Mr. Roosevelt's, before this democracy decides such fateful questions for our whole people.

The plan to avoid present legal or popular restrictions on credits to belligerents by furnishing them, not with money to buy our goods (taking a promise to repay money in return) but by furnishing them with goods themselves taking against those goods some lien or mortgage or "recapture agreement," may be an ingenious quarter-back sneak through the line of the law and public opinion, but it is something less than frank or forthright.

Both amount to exactly the same thing in the end and that is lending unlimited money or credit to finance a foreign war. To say this, may be "banal" and "legalistic." Most simple truths are "banal." Furthermore, the "legalism" that exposes this legalistic distinction is not half as reprehensible as the legalism which is advanced to gloss it over.

It may be that financing British war purchases here is both necessary and desirable. But let's be told exactly how necessary they are, with some regard to our own relative interests, both as to relative financial burden and relative defensive needs. Then, if the balance of merit in our own interest indicates that we should do so, let's do it frankly and forthrightly within reasonable limits and without recourse to any "clever little schemes."

Some of the arguments recently advanced give no great respect to any assumption of American intelligence. "No major war was ever won or lost for lack of money." This is uttered in the same breath with the urging that Britain's money is exhausted and that, if we don't pony up, she may lose her war.

It is uttered in the memory of the south's lost cause, when confederate resistance gave out because confederate money—or credit which is the same thing—gave out. It is uttered despite the generally acknowledged certainty that the Allies would have lost the war in 1917 for lack of money if we had not supplied it—and countless other well known refutations in history. For that World War credit to England we became "Uncle Shylock," and no less an authority than Winston Churchill has arraigned us for butting in to prevent then a peace by negotiation.

An accompanying assertion from other sources is that we "have been paid with a handsome profit for all our contributions." By many times our greatest contribution either to date or in the immediate prospective future was a shipment of about 1-3 of our whole World War reserve supply of rifles, artillery and ammunition immediately after the French disaster—a mountainous series of shipments.

What were we paid for that? The transaction was not even reported until long after it had happened. The book-keeping credits

Wisconsin Health

BY DR. C. A. HARPER
State Health Officer

With half the world at war, the whole world is depressed, and we feel the need of looking around for comforting things to think about.

Glancing over the international list of 215 official death causes, there is consolation to be found in the fact that they are not all at work against us everywhere at a given time. More than 20 of these causes, for example, spared Wisconsin entirely last year, while ten others were limited to one victim each in our fortunate commonwealth.

Not one death was reported in Wisconsin last year from paratyphoid, typhus fever, relapsing fever, undulant fever, cholera, plague, anthrax, rabies, leprosy, yellow fever, gout, scurvy, beriberi, hunger and thirst, wounds of war, legal executions, attack by venomous animals, accidents in mines and quarries or, last but not least, by execution of civilians by belligerent armies.

The death causes which claimed but one Wisconsin life apiece last year included smallpox, glanders, malaria, German measles, infantile, elevator accidents, catatonia, osteomalacia, and accidents from machinery used for recreation (a cause which unfortunately does not include the automobile).

So what? demands the cynic. So hope springs eternal, we reply. So we take a good night's rest and rise in the morning to carry on for the cause of the good life.

Is it worth the efforts? inquires the pessimist. If it were not, we assure him, there now would be no more sign of human life on this planet than on the fiery sun itself.

Marion—The Salem Evangelical church choir presented the following Christmas concert at the church Thursday evening:

"A Joyous Christmas Song," choir; "Cherry Tree Carol," solo, Jean Lau; soprano solo, Mrs. George Tjaden; "The Wonderful Story," choir; scripture and prayer; response, "We Praise Thee," girls' quartet; "Today There Is Ringing," Christiansen, the choir; offertory, piano duo, June Moerike and Odell Ehrlicke; violin solo, Richard Valby; "Traditional Christmas Hymns," choir; "When the Sun had Sunk to Rest," choir. The accompanist was Mrs. Herbert Ehrlicke and the conductor George Tjaden.

The Northeastern Wisconsin Firemen's association met at the city hall Tuesday evening. After the business meeting a social time was held.

The Schafkopf club met Monday evening with Jay Halpou. Prize winners were Henry Bowers, Sr., Henry Kussman and Herman Peters.

Mrs. H. A. Spiegel was hostess Wednesday afternoon, to the O. O. O. Bridge club. Awards for high scores were awarded to Mrs. E. S. Rogers and Mrs. Clara Michaelis. Mrs. H. F. Peters and Mrs. W. C. Dedolph were guests of the club. Major E. S. Rogers was at Wausau Saturday evening where he attended a farewell party for Lieutenant-Colonel Hughes, who has been assigned to another district. Captain and Mrs. Walter Wulk also attended the party.

Fred Hofman, Frank Sprenger, Herman Spiegel, Harvey Meyer and Henry Schmidt, chairman of the town of Grant, attended the meeting of the Highway 45 association Monday afternoon at the Elks club at Antigo. Mr. Hofman is vice president of the association.

The Marion Chapter of Future Farmers of America held its annual parent and son banquet in the high school gymnasium, Saturday evening. The home economics class and their instructor, Miss Carolyn Page served the meal.

The Womans' Club held its annual Christmas party, at the city hall, Monday evening. After the business meeting the entertainment committee took charge of the program, which consisted of several selections and a one-act play. The committee included Mrs. Martin Lutzewitz, Mrs. J. H. Driessen, Mrs. C. L. Bowers, Mrs. Gordon Colton, Mrs. Dan Wulk and Mrs. H. A. Spiegel. Gifts were exchanged and a lunch was served by the committee.

The senior oratory contest was held Thursday. Taking part were Bill Olson, "And Sudden Death"; Ned Nehring, "The Children's Hour"; William Ehlert, "Enough of This"; and Ray Maas, "Tragedy of the Ninety-eight Cents."

The dramatic club presented a one-act comedy, "Christmas Trimmings", Friday afternoon in the high school assembly. The cast: first burglar, James Beyers; second burglar, Marvin Buss; Uncle Joe, Merlin Brunner; Aunt Kate, Odell Ehrlicke; Mrs. J. P. Saunders, Mary Beth Rogers; Mrs. J. P. Saunders, John Buhr; Jepp, James Plogger; Ethel, Darl Janitz; Barbara, Inez Meyer; Deborah, Dixie Wulk.

The girls' glee club and the German club furnished music for the program and Santa Claus distributed candy and a gift to each student.

The Marion schools closed Friday for Christmas vacation. They will reopen on Jan. 6.

Chicago —(P)—The Peter Fox Brewing Co. announced yesterday purchase of the Michigan Brewing Co., of Grand Rapids. The plant will be known as Peter Fox Brewing Co. of Michigan.

200 Adults, Children at Lodge Party

Over 200 adults and children attended the joint Christmas party for Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters last evening at Castle hall. The children presented a program of recitations and songs after which Santa Claus gave each child a gift. Arrangements were made by Mrs. George Schmidt, Mrs. Margaret Shimek and Mrs. Lloyd M. Schindler.

During a business meeting of Pythian Sisters plans were made for a joint installation with the knights Jan. 2. Mrs. R. A. Buxton will install the women's officers and several grand officers are expected to be present for the knights' installation.

The children's Christmas party given annually by the United Commercial Travelers auxiliary will begin promptly at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Odd Fellows hall. There will be a Christmas tree, and Santa Claus will distribute bags to the children. Members who have children wishing to participate have been asked to call Mrs. John Bonini, chairman of the party, or any member of her committee, which includes Mrs. C. A. Beirnard, Mrs. H. E. Trettien and Mrs. Wilbur Reick.

About 175 members and children were present at the Christmas party given Thursday afternoon at the E. M. B. A. clubrooms by Delta chapter, auxiliary to the Employees Mutual Benefit association. Group singing opened the program, and then the children sang songs, gave recitations and played instrumental selections. Marion Kosbab played "Jingle Bells" on her accordion to herald the arrival of Santa Claus, who distributed gifts to the children around the Christmas tree. Officers will be elected by the chapter at its next meeting, Jan. 9.

The auxiliary to National Association of Letter Carriers will have a business meeting Saturday night at the home of Mrs. George Grimmer, route 3, Appleton. A Christmas party will follow and gifts will be exchanged.

Charles O. Baer auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans, will have a Christmas party for members at 6 o'clock tonight at the armory. A dinner will precede the party with Mrs. Minnie Steinhauer and a volunteer committee in charge. Mrs. Matt Bauer will be chairman of entertainment.

Women of the Moose brought groceries to their meeting and Christmas party Wednesday night at Moosehall for the baskets that Mrs. George Pruchnoffski, social service chairman of the lodge, is filling for needy families. The group also voted to send a check to the Good Fellows fund. Mrs. Julia Foreman, Moosehaven chairman, read a letter of thanks from the Moosehaven home at Orange Grove, Fla., to which the local lodge had sent Christmas gifts, and Mrs. Arthur Yohr, Mooseheart chairman, read a similar letter from the Mooseheart home, Mooseheart, Ill.

Form Hockey Squads At Senior High School

With the flooding of the hockey rink at Jones park, hockey squads have been organized at Appleton High school under the direction of William C. Pickett, physical education director.

Captains of the teams are Jerry Loeper, Orville Shebilski, Ray Kraft, Clifford Ramsey, Ray Drexler and Larz Johnson. Games in the league will be played at the Jones park rink.

Mrs. Charles Kaufert, Menasha, received a special prize, and gifts were exchanged.

Gets 60-Day Term, $100 Fine for Contempt

Detroit —(P)—Harry R. Sherry, general manager of construction for the Herman Gardens housing project here, began a 60-day term today in the county jail after his conviction on contempt charges by Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, acting as a one-man grand jury, investigating graft allegations. Judge Ferguson also imposed a $100 fine upon Sherry for his refusal to answer questions in the grand jury chamber. Jail attendants said they had been instructed that Sherry could purge himself of the contempt charge at any time by agreeing to answer the questions.

Hollywood—The sort of rumors I hate to hear are coming from Lombard-Gable way, with an important decision due to be made soon by Carole Lombard. Verree Teasdale (Mrs. Adolphe Menjou) is out of the hospital after a three-week tussle with acute bronchitis—more serious than even her intimates realized.

The new gal in Freeman (Amos and Andy) Godsen's life is attractive Barbara Trippet, local society reporter—they'll merge when his divorce is final. Mary Brian is returning to Hollywood following the flop of "Off the Record," NY play in which she was a "heavy." Terrific turnout of stars is scheduled for that Legion Stadium-British War Relief card tomorrow night.

Ummmm, who's the doctor who goes calling on Myrna Loy—and not just to hear her say ahhhh. Arline Judge and ex-husband-Director Wesley Ruggles may go to court to decide ownership of valuable furniture. . . . Hal Ben Hecht lost an $80,000 deal at one of the majors last week because he refused to apologize for a prickly poem he penned two years ago. . . . Only two film companies are failing to come through with Xmas bonuses for employees.

If Ken Murray ISN'T married to Cletus Caldwell (he says not), it won't be long now. . . . That feud between Mary Pickford and Producer Alexander Korda flared loudly (and how!) at a dinner party at Adrian's the other evening. . . . Brenda Joyce, who probably would have married college-mate Owen Ward had fame not found her, won't. . . . The Will Hays office is moving to "clean house," in anticipation of a concerted drive by the Legion of Decency after Jan. 1st.

MEMORIES: When Ruth Chatterton flew from a preview in tears because the audience laughed during her most emotional scene. . . . When Gloria Swanson, making a regal entrance at the Cocoanut Grove, tripped and did a perfect brodie. . . . When Buster Keaton, after paying three $50 rewards for return of his "lost" dog, discovered he was the victim of a dog-napping gang. . . . When William Haines, amused by the hauteur of a female reporter who was interviewing him, suddenly seized the lady and stood her on her head. . . . When Marlene Dietrich, paying her first visit to a beach pleasure pier, spent three solid hours riding the scenic railway. . . . When I went to interview Pola Negri—and she held out her hand to be kissed!

BELLS AND NO BELLS. Bells to: Wallace Beery, for donating hundreds of dollars worth of food and the services of two men, for the feeding of snowbound elk near his Jackson Hole fishing lodge. . . . Virginia Gilmore, who despite screen success, uses her evenings to work for a college degree instead of spending them in night clubs. . . . Rand Brooks, for organizing Hollywood's younger set and staging a variety show and Christmas party for children at a local charity hospital. . . . NO BELLS to: Martha Raye, for her persistent raps at the movies, when she owes most of her fame to them. . . . Those Hollywood agents who, against the best interests of their clients, incite them to rebel against studio orders.

HOLLYWOOD AFTER DARK: Tyrone Power planted in front of a department store's Xmas window, fascinated by the display of super-deluxe electric trains. . . . Wally Beery taking 8-year-old Carol Ann to the Movie Parade Revival Theater to see one of his early comedies, made 18 years before she was born. . . . A major commotion in front of the Y. M. C. Lakes Fishing Is Discussed

International Board Confers on Action To Improve Conditions

Buffalo, N. Y.—(AP)—The International Board of Inquiry for Great Lakes Fisheries came to this Lake Erie port today to find out what improvements might be made to aid fishermen on both sides of the Canadian-American border.

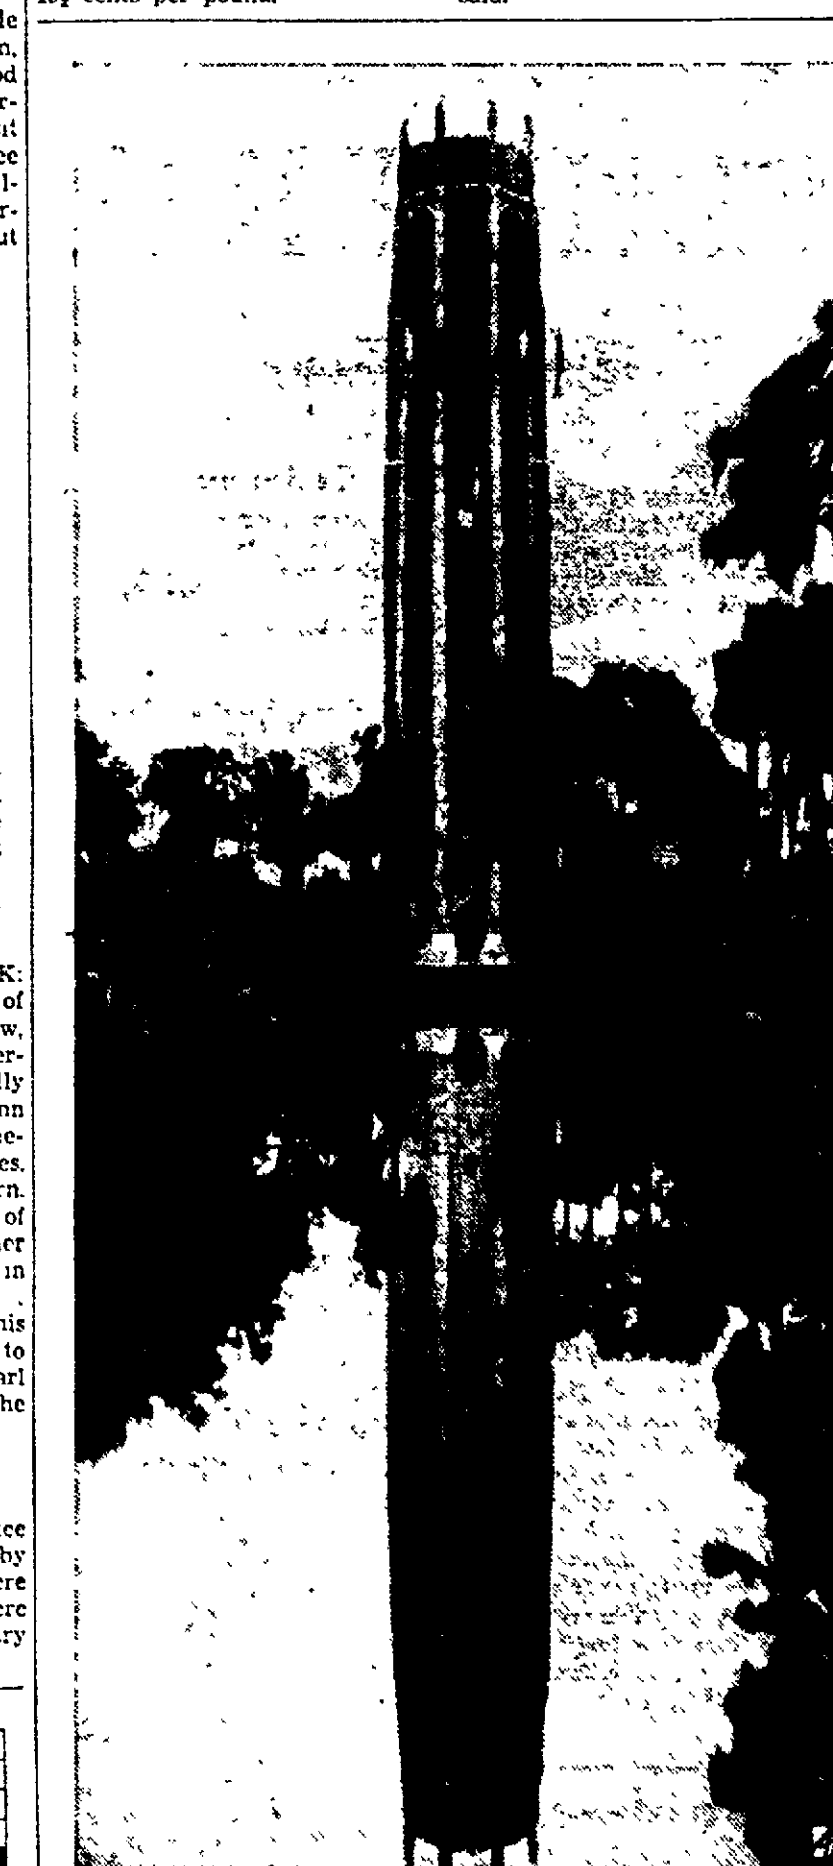

Rochester, N. Y.—(AP)—Shrinking population of trout in Lake Ontario was attributed in large measure to depredations by eels, at a hearing conducted yesterday by the International Board of Inquiry for Great Lakes Fisheries.

The board, composed of Archibald G. Huntsman and D. J. Taylor, Toronto, Ont., Hubert R. Gallagher, Chicago, and John Van Oosten, Ann Arbor, Mich., appeared especially interested in testimony submitted by William Cahill, Oswego, N. Y., commercial fisherman. He was one of 30 who testified.

Cahill told of traveling over trout spawning beds and seeing eels, "by the millions," feasting on trout eggs.

School Bus Check To Be Made Next Week

Henry J. Van Straten, county superintendent of schools, and Captain Charles Steidl of the county traffic squad next week will begin their annual check on school buses in the county. Before school districts can get their annual state aid, their school buses must be approved by the state motor vehicle department. School buses are used in 13 school districts, Van Straten said.

The World of STAMPS

Latest non-postage stamps appearing in this country are colorful. Apparently the first to go patriotic is the Bronx Zoo stamp. This arrives from the New York Zoological society, the first stamp ever designed by Walter Addison. A young artist, he frequently sketches animals at the zoo and now has an exhibit of his paintings and sculpture there.

Most recent entertainment at this metropolitan zoo is elephant-riding and this apparently is where Addison got his inspiration for the picture on the stamp. He shows a gay elephant in gray, red-lined collar against an almost-ultramarine background. Astride the elephant on a red saddle are two children waving their arms. An attendant in deep blue is pictured too. The inscription "Bronx Zoo," is in white letters outlined with red.

A free stamp will be placed on the back of self-addressed postal cards sent by collectors to William Bridges, Curator of Publications, Bronx Park, New York City. Through an error, a few sheets of 1940 seals of the National Tuberculosis Association show a white "S" on the blue field below the cross of the 56th seal.

The correct place for the 11thographer's mark is the 56th seal but it should be a small ultramarine letter in the yellow space under the book at the right of that seal. You find the 56th seal by counting six rows from the left of the sheet. The marks either are "E," "S," "D," or "U."

Since these stamps have no postal value they are supposed to be put on the back of letters.

Over 3,000 covers received the cachet of the American Philatelic Congress in New York recently, according to Kent B. Stiles, who was in charge of putting the imprint of the congress on envelopes arriving

South Carolina Soldier Joins Up Whenever France Fights

BY GLADWIN HILL

New York—(AP)—Captain Paul Ayres Rockwell, a distinguished-looking man with a bristling white mustache, is one of the few people who have made a lifetime avocation of being a soldier—specifically a soldier for France.

A South Carolina-born journalist by profession, Rockwell was one of the first Americans to enlist with the French forces at the beginning of the World war.

With the outbreak of the Riff war in 1925, he re-enlisted, this time in the French Foreign Legion, and served in Africa.

Now he has just returned from service as an officer on the French general staff in the present war. He was in charge of allocating American volunteers, and was just getting the United States' unofficial participation in the imbroglio organized when the combination of weaknesses he had watched gathering during his years of residence in France brought about the nation's collapse.

Rockwell fled to Bordeaux a day or so behind his colleagues in the war ministry, dodged the imminent danger of death or capture for weeks on end, and spent subsequent months in the complicated process of getting formally discharged from the French army and assembling the passports, visas and cash necessary to get home.

The captain, at 51, is like a Dixie version of C. Aubrey Smith, the cinema prototype of the stiff-spined but warm-hearted British gentleman, with thinning hair, an authoritative nose and a scholarly manner.

Like most individuals who undertake unorthodox activities, Rockwell can't quite put his finger on the reason that motivated him. "I've always been interested in military affairs," he essays in explanation, "and there have been soldiers in my family, in every war, as far back as I can trace."

'Y' Board Happy As It Welcomes A Debtless Era

City Association Owed $48,000, but It's Paid; Mortgage Gets Frame

The board of directors of the Appleton Y. M. C. A. received a report last night that final payment of the association's $48,000 indebtedness has been made and that the "Y" is clear of debt for the first time in "many years."

Homer Gebhardt, "Y" secretary, explained today that in January of 1938 a quiet campaign to raise money to pay off the association's debt, which included a $40,000 mortgage, was begun.

The campaign reached a successful climax a short time ago with payment of the final portion of the indebtedness.

The campaign to raise the money was led by William E. Buchanan, who has since resigned from the board of directors, and T. E. Orbinson, president of the board, and netted a total of $49,984. This was to be paid over a three-year period, but the final payment was completed recently.

Instead of holding a mortgage-burning ceremony, the "Y" directors last night agreed to frame the document and place it in the directors' room "as a warning against getting in debt again."

Jim Miller, Hi-Y club member, last night gave reports on the national Hi-Y congress at Oberlin, O., last summer and the state older boys conference recently at Madison.

The board renewed $41,500 in insurance on the "Y" for a three-year period. This is one-third of the association's insurance program.

A. A. L. OFFICER — LeRoy G. Stohlman of Lincoln, Nebraska, has been elected secretary of the Aid Association for Lutherans. He will move to Appleton with his family next month.

Works Board Gets Bids on Graders

Bids on a power grader equipped with a wing plow blade and on a sidewalk tractor were being considered by the board of public works this afternoon in city hall.

Both units will be used in snow removal operations to augment present equipment. The grader and tractor will be used in the summer time conditioning streets.

Awarding of contracts on the pieces of machinery will be considered at an adjourned meeting of the council at 7 o'clock Thursday evening in city hall.

Roosevelt Order Delays New London Post Office Building

Construction on two Wisconsin post offices, one at New London and the other at Green Bay, is being held up in line with President Roosevelt's decision to curtail all non-defense expenditures.

The projects are among 200 post offices and other public buildings in the nation on which construction has been delayed. The New London post office was to be an $83,000 job and the Green Bay project was to cost $250,000.

Officials of the public buildings administration said that the halt in construction resulted directly from an executive request that funds intended for PBA works outside of the District of Columbia be held up.

The officials added that the projects on which construction was being deferred were those on which no bids had been asked and no construction actually started.

3 Actions Against City of Waupaca to Be Heard Jan. 10

Waupaca — Justice S. W. Johnson in justice court this morning set Jan. 10 for hearing of three actions for amounts not exceeding $200 brought by two Waupaca doctors against the city of Waupaca. The actions are a result of the city disallowing certain bills submitted for indigent sick care. The actions were brought by Dr. C. W. Andrews and Dr. Sam Salan, as co-partners under the firm name of City hospital and by the two doctors as individuals, and by the two doctors as co-partners under the firm name of City hospital.

U. W. Students Begin Exodus From Madison

Madison — Schoolbooks, classes and other campus activities were put aside today by about 11,000 University of Wisconsin students who happily packed belongings and began the trip home for the Christmas holidays.

Extra transportation facilities have been provided. Four extra trains, special buses, and additional planes will be pressed into service. Classes will be resumed Jan. 7.

State employees will get an extra half-day for Christmas. Governor Heil has ordered department heads to close all offices at noon Dec. 24.

"This will make it possible for any of our people who live at a distance to get home for Christmas eve and all our Madison employees to get to their families without hurrying," the governor said. "This should be done so that there will be no loss to any employees."

Dies After Giving His 'Lucky Piece' to Friend

Sharpsburg, Md. — For years John Eichelberger carried a silver dollar as a "lucky piece." Then "tired of carrying it," he gave it to a friend one night. Eichelberger was found dead in bed next morning.

Erbe-Hoffman Funeral home, Chilton, by the Rev. J. M. Ayers. Burial will be in a Chilton cemetery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Leonhardt

Mrs. Elizabeth Leonhardt, 78, 714 W. Eighth street, died this morning at a hospital in St. Paul, Minn., after a 1-week illness. Mrs. Leonhardt, a lifelong resident of Appleton, had been visiting at St. Paul.

Surviving are a son, Henry, Chicago; two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Baum, Battle Creek, Mich.; Mrs. Robert Gose, St. Paul.

Mrs. John Kuehler

Mrs. John Kuehler, Chilton, died early this morning.

Good Fellows Have Given Half Of Fund Needed for Christmas

Good Fellows again gave their Christmas basket fund a substantial boost yesterday and this morning when they contributed $93.25, raising the total for this year to $379.55. That is slightly more than half enough to provide Christmas baskets for all the families on the lists of the societies cooperating through Appleton Relief and Welfare council.

The gratitude that should be in the hearts of men and women who are not in want should be sufficient to cause them to be Good Fellows to the needy. If all those who could give would make a contribution there would be happiness in the home of every unfortunate family in Appleton this year.

Being a Good Fellow is such an easy task. All that one needs is a heart touched by the plea of the friendless. There is no set amount one must contribute. The Good Fellow's contribution is always the measure of his ability tempered by his charity.

Approximately 110 baskets can be filled with the contributions thus far received. There are only four days left to provide the money for the other 90 that are needed. There are enough people in Appleton who can be Good Fellows if they want to be to make sure that none of these will be missed on Christmas day.

'Hard Luck' Woman Will Relate Story On Radio Program

Mrs. Charles Dwyer, town of Oneida's hard luck woman, is planning a trip to New York, and she also is planning to leave a note to burglars to pick on someone else for a change.

Last week a succession of hard luck befell her—her house was burglarized, her car broke down, a borrowed horse fell dead and the battery of her car was stolen. Burglars, breaking into her home a second time, took a davenport and other furniture.

The tale of Mrs. Dwyer's misfortune reached the "We, the People," program and she has been invited to appear on the radio program in New York Dec. 31. She stated, in a telephone conversation to New York, that she was reluctant to go, but was promised enough money to pay her expenses and for clothes to make the trip.

Assessors Ask More Data Of Stocks of Merchants

Madison — Members of the city assessors section of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities advocated at their annual convention yesterday a change in state law to provide them with more accurate information on stocks and equipment of merchants and professional men subject to local taxation.

They proposed that each taxpayer engaged in business be required to file duplicate inventory reports when they make their income tax returns to the state. One copy of the report then would be sent to the assessor in the community where the taxpayer lives.

James Beth, Green Bay assessor, was elected chairman of the group. Ernest Moser of Sheboygan Falls and William End of Wauwatosa were named vice chairmen.

Highway Committee to Purchase Gas Monday

The county highway committee is receiving bids until 10 o'clock Monday morning at the courthouse of offices on a 10,000-gallon tank car of gasoline, according to Arnold Krueger, county highway commissioner. Information concerning specifications may be had by contacting the highway office.

May Apply in Milwaukee For Naval Air Training

Milwaukee — The navy recruiting office at the federal building here will be able to accept applications from men between 20 and 27 years old for flight training as aviation cadets, it was announced today.

Heretofore such applications had to be made at Chicago or at the naval training station at Great Lakes, Ill.

The day selected for consideration of the committee's report because new supervisors may take office in May, and because an earlier date would not give the special committee sufficient time to conduct its survey, it was said.

Dairy Days

The board proclaimed March 6, 7 and 8 as Outagamie county Dairy days upon the request of Earl Engel, commander of the Oney Johnston post, American Legion, who said the post planned to hold a dairy show at the armory on those days.

Mayor William Gantter of Kaukauna appeared before the board in behalf of the city of Kaukauna's request that the county pave two Kaukauna streets that serve as connecting links. The streets are Island street between County Trunk Z and the Wisconsin avenue bridge, and Desnoyer street between Taylor street and Highway 55. The request was referred to the highway committee which will report at the May session.

The board gave Raymond P. Dohr, whose term as district attorney ends Jan. 1, a rising vote of thanks for the manner in which he conducted county business during his four years in office.

Interest on postponed taxes will, when collected, be turned over with the taxes to the various municipalities, the board decided. It was pointed out that the county holds them in trust only, and has no right to the interest.

The board cleared the way for prompt payment of compensation claims in giving the clerk and treasurer the right to make payment upon order of the highway commissioner and district attorney. The action was taken to prevent the county from being penalized for not making payments within specified time as required by the state. The county has its own compensation insurance fund.

The Weather

Forecast for Wisconsin:

Fair tonight, Saturday and Sunday; slightly colder tonight, somewhat warmer Saturday.

General Weather Conditions:

A low pressure area which is now central over Lake Superior has been attended by light rain or snow during the last 24 hours over the Lake region and New England states. Fire Causes $500 Loss

On Farm Near Seymour

Seymour — Fire of unknown origin destroyed the granary, corn crib and garage at the farm of Vincent Murphy, route 3, Seymour, about 7:30 Thursday morning. Because the sleet storm had impaired telephone service, Murphy had to drive to Seymour to notify the fire department. A favorable wind kept the flames from spreading to other buildings. The loss, estimated at $500, was partially covered by insurance.

It Is Said----

Three carollers, a man, woman and child, singing "Joy To the World," greet motorists crossing the Memorial Drive bridge.

The figures are atop the Wisconsin Michigan Power company plant in an electric sign that is 40 by 65 feet in dimension. The figures are painted with transparent lacquer. The head of each caroller is 25 feet high. Six big snowflakes, animated by off-and-on flashing of lights, complete the Christmas display.

'I Am an American' Opens German Department Program

The German department of Appleton High school was host to parents and friends at the annual Christmas program Thursday evening in the high school auditorium. More than 60 students, enrolled in the German classes appeared in a holiday skit or sang in the chorus. The program opened with the chorus singing "I Am an American" directed by Miss Sophie Haase, German instructor. A group of folk songs followed. Doris Werner and Norman Beckman played "Das Heidenroslein" and "Auf Wiedersehn" on their violins accompanied by Shirley Miller at the piano. A humorous number was presented by a group of first year boys. Ralph Buesing played the part of the old-fashioned school master. The boys were coached by Norval Henn, German instructor.

Goethe Poem "Erlkönig" Set to Music by Schubert was sung by Frances Galpin accompanied by David Bliss at the piano. The play this year was centered around the homecoming of a sailor. In the cast of characters were Gladys Lust, Jean Watson, Fred Heinritz, James Germanson and Alvin Braun.

The last portion of the program was devoted to Christmas carols. As an angel, played by Margaret Lally, stepped forward to read the Christmas story from the Bible, the curtains parted upon a stable scene showing Mary and Joseph. With the strains of "Stille Nacht" the program was concluded. Properties were collected by Inez Deschler, Elizabeth Haug, Miriam Carlson, and Janet Jones. On the make-up crew were Miss Lally, Miss Jones and Judy Marston.

The Latin club of the high school entertained mothers of members of the group Thursday afternoon in the Early American room. Parents and students gathered around the open fireplace to hear Christmas carols and the story of the origin of the holiday. Following the program, refreshments were served and guests were invited to visit the rooms of the Latin department. Miss Elsie Kopplin, Latin instructor, was in charge assisted by Miss Enola Brandt, Latin instructor.

Over 88 Million for Next Michigan Budget

Lansing — Gus T. Hartman, state budget director, announced today he would recommend to the next Michigan legislature a total general fund appropriation of $88,379,024, approximately $2,000,000 more than was appropriated for the current fiscal year and about $2,000,000 less than actually was spent this year.

At the same time he wrote Governor-elect Murray D. Van Wagoner, tendering his resignation, effective Jan. 1. His term does not expire until June 30.

Hartman said his budget message estimated revenues of approximately $88,800,000 for the both years of the next biennium. Revenues this year were figured at $90,200,000.

Injured by Tractor

Darlington — Charles Moore, 30, farmer living in Lamont township east of here, was injured seriously late yesterday when a tractor with which he was hauling logs overturned, crushing his right leg. He was taken to a Madison hospital.

Fatally Injured

Milwaukee — Hugh Swafford, 42, of New Butler, a North Western road switchman, was found injured fatally at the E. Buffalo street right-of-way here early today. He apparently fell while uncoupling cars and was dragged along the track.

Robber Faces State Prison

Man Released in South Dakota Must Serve in Waupun

Black Falls, S. D.—The South Dakota pardon board announced Thursday that Reinhold Engel, 35, would be turned over to the authorities in Wisconsin, where he is under conviction for the $9,800 robbery of the First Bank of Grantsburg in January, 1931.

The board's announcement followed Governor Bushfield's signing of a clemency order for Engel's release from the South Dakota penitentiary, where he served eight years of a 30-year sentence for participation in the $22,000 robbery of an Ipswich, S. D., bank in May, 1932.

The Ipswich bank was robbed while Engel was at liberty on bail pending an appeal from his conviction in the Grantsburg case. Engel's plea for a new trial in the Wisconsin case was denied. His appeal was based on the contention that testimony of an alleged accomplice, who later was declared insane, was used against him.

Engel was sentenced to 15 to 40 years imprisonment in the Grantsburg case.

Play, Music are Features of Ladies Aid Christmas Party

New London—A 1-act play and musical selections entertained women of the Lutheran Ladies Aid society at their annual Christmas party at the church parlors Thursday afternoon.

In the play, "Christmas Indian Suits," were Mrs. William Beberg, Mrs. John Sanders, Mrs. William Marks, and Mrs. Louis Schmalleberg as mothers, and Mrs. Henry Lippold, Mrs. Leo Meschke, Mrs. Harold Pieper, Mrs. Arthur Unger, Mrs. Roy Queeman, Mrs. Frank Huebner, and Mrs. Rudy Floetz as children.

A clarinet solo was played by Dale Schrock. Readings were given by Mrs. Richard Gehlke and Mrs. William Marks, and songs were sung by a trio of boys consisting of Kenneth Lippold, Leonard Fankow, and Jackie Meschke. Members of the Monday Night club also sang. The Rev. W. E. Pankow, pastor, addressed the women briefly, gifts were exchanged, and a lunch was served.

Twenty-five members of the Anna Heath Junior club of the Women's Relief corps were entertained at a Christmas party at the home of Mrs. L. J. Manske Wednesday evening. Santa Claus visited the party and distributed gifts of candy. Bunches were played and prizes were won by Patsy Beaudoin, Ruth Ann Charlesworth and Betty VanAlstine. Assisting Mrs. Manske with the party and supper were Junior directors Mrs. George Humblet, Mrs. Milo DeGroff and Mrs. Clarence Beaudoin, and Mrs. Peter Schuh, president.

The women's corps will hold its Christmas party at the Odd Fellow hall on Dec. 27 and the junior club will hold election of officers at its next meeting at the hall Jan. 10.

Club Prepares For Ski Tourney

Central U. S. Jumping Meet to be Held at New London Jan. 26

New London — Preliminary preparations for the Central United States Ski Jumping championship tournament scheduled at Mosquito hill here Jan. 26 were begun by the New London Ski club with election of officers at the Mo-Ski-Tow hill sports center clubhouse Wednesday night.

Ralph Hanson was reelected to continue as president. Walter Stewart was named vice president; Floyd Webb was elected secretary to succeed Dr. L. W. Monsted, and M. C. Trayser was returned to the job of treasurer to succeed Leonard Cline.

Frank Carlson, Scandinavia, a former rider for the club and a member of the board of directors, was appointed hill captain.

Possible improvements in the big hill were considered and details of the tournament, the largest conducted in this section of the United States under the sponsorship of the Central U. S. Ski association, were discussed. The first such tournament was held here in 1939 after Chicago was forced to give it up and the event attracted a record crowd of thousands.

Barlow Cage Team Is Unbeaten in Class B

New London — Kenneth Barlow's A. P. C.'s finished the first half of the boys' intramural basketball season undefeated in Class B at Washington High school this week. The team won all six games. Ray White's All-Stars are second with a split record, Delford Hanke's Bulldogs third with two victories, and Willard Meyers Beelbeugs are last with one win.

Jack Collier's Gophers took first in Class A with only one defeat. Jack Dent's Maroons were only one game behind in second place. Bill Brown's Wolverines were third with two wins and Bob Nelson's Boiler-makers lost five.

Second half play will start Jan. 8.

Lebanon Squad Regains Tie for Lead in League

Scores Triple Win To Share Top With Ostrander Bowlers

Borden Farmer League
Standings:	W.	L.
Lebanon	20	13
Ostrander	20	13
Royalton	19	14
Bear Creek	17	16
Bordens	16	17
Skunk Hollow	14	19
Maple Creek	13	20
Black Creek	12	21

New London—Lebanon bowlers regained a tie for first in Borden Farmers league when they picked three games off Black Creek at Prah's alleys last night. Top kegling of the evening was turned in by C. A. Wells as he whacked a 204 and 559 combination to lead Bordens in three victories over Bear Creek, pulling the latter down into third. Art Murphy sparked Lebanon with counts of 183 and 446.

Ostrander kept even with two wins over the Skunk Hollowers and Royalton hung onto second place with two games from Maple Creek. George Kelly led the winners with tallies of 192 and 471.

Refreshment League
Gerhard Ladwig posted a 221 game in one spurt to help Miller High Lives take the leading Eggers Tap Rooms two games and tie Vertines for second as the latter grabbed two from the Orange Kists. Clarence Laux paced the Dairyman with a 574 series in lines of 198, 200 and 176. Harold Buss grooved a 515 total for the losers. Top man for Eggers was Luke Thomas with 512.

Ladies Club League
Meartz Insurance and Meschke's Grocery remained tied for the lead as the club reached the halfway mark. Each lost two games, Meartz to Lippold and Queeman Grocers and Meschke's to Restle's Garage. Mrs. Henry Lippold of the latter rolled best scores with 153 and 445.

Benefit Association Of Kimberly-Clark To Meet at Neenah

Kimberly — Harold Fird and Otto Hannemann, local committeemen, of the Kimberly-Clark Mutual Benefit association, will attend the association's annual meeting at Neenah the first part of next month. Mr. Hannemann said that among the business to be transacted will be the proposal to increase benefits $3.00 per week by increasing the assessments from $1.30 to $1.50 per month.

During the last two years the association committee has been discussing ways and means of increasing the daily benefit provisions for sickness, on and off duty accidents and disabilities. They proposed that the daily benefits be advanced from the present $1.40 per day basis to $2 per day. This would advance the rate 20 cents per month and would add 60 cents benefit payments per day in case of disabilities, making the total weekly benefits $12.

The regulations of the organization permit the committee to make the benefit change and to increase the assessment rate, but the committee preferred to have the entire membership vote on the proposal. At a recent election held at the Kimberly mill, employees here favored the change.

The American Legion Tuesday evening completed plans for the annual Christmas party for Kimberly children Friday evening at the clubhouse. The program is being sponsored by the legion, its auxiliary, Booster club and village board, and will get started at 6:15 due to the basketball game with Denmark at the high school, which starts at 8 o'clock. The change in time will allow the villagers ample time to attend both programs.

Turn Down Blinds but 'Jalousies' are O. K.

Lincoln, O. — Auditor Floyd Griffin of Allen county is going to have Venetian blinds at his office windows after all.

County commissioners, who refused to approve purchase of the blinds, recently signed requisitions from Griffin for a "jalousie." Later someone consulted a dictionary. It defined "jalousie" as "a blind or shutter having horizontal slats."

from Beloit. The pair will leave Beloit Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt Knapstein left today to spend Christmas with their sons at Chicago and Michigan City, Ind. They plan to return next Thursday.

The President's Plan

With the announcement of the President's plan to help Great Britain by lending her arms this country passes from large promises carried out slyly and partially by clever devices to substantial deeds openly and honestly avowed. The more the plan is studied the more surely will it receive the support of the American people. For it is a sound plan, based squarely on the principle of all aid to Great Britain short of war; it is an effective plan for the immediate strengthening of the American national defense; it is a far-sighted and wise plan for the insurance of the vital interest of the United States during the war, after the war, and whatever the course and outcome of the war.

The basic principle of the plan is that the total war resources of this country shall be controlled by the United States government and used only for the defense of American interests. It does away at one stroke with the whole notion that the United States will sell lethal weapons to the highest bidder; it sets up the doctrine that the traffic in arms is not a commercial affair between private interests and foreign governments but that it is a national affair involving the defense of American vital interests.

As a result of the election it was settled by agreement of both the parties that at this stage of the war, it is an American vital interest that Great Britain shall conduct a victorious resistance. Since that is the settled national policy, the supplying of arms to Great Britain cannot be allowed to depend upon the willingness or ability of American manufacturers to reach profitable bargains with the British government. For if it is now an American interest to supply Great Britain, then there must be a national and not a private plan to supply Great Britain. If at any time in the future it appeared that the purposes of Great Britain were not also American purposes, we must retain in our hands the right and the means to maintain our own interests. Now, here is a plan which does both of these things: guarantees full aid to Britain short of war and, when properly developed, will go very far indeed toward guaranteeing the interests of the United States in the prosecution of the war, in the settlement and in the post-war period.

It is not a plan devised by private committees. It is the plan of the president of the United States, who is charged with the conduct of foreign relations and is the commander in chief of all the armed forces.

Says Plan Will Stand Test of Open Debate

There is no phase of this plan which in principle—the practical details, of course, remain to be scrutinized—will not stand the test of open debate, least of all on the question of whether it is in fact a measure short of war. It is a measure short of war—three thousand miles short of war. For every American action under this plan occurs within the territorial limits of the United States. If Hitler chose to consider the plan an act of war, he would have to cross the Atlantic Ocean to fight us about it. That is something he certainly cannot do as long as the British are at war with him and, according to Gen. Robert E. Wood, acting chairman of the American First Committee, that is something Hitler could not do even if he won the war.

Gen. Wood may be too much of an optimist when he rests his whole case on the assurance that "there is absolutely no danger of an invasion of the United States even if Germany is completely victorious." But if he is right in thinking that a victorious Hitler cannot attack us, then there is no risk whatever in the President's policy. If the America First Committee is right that we cannot be attacked if we do not help Britain, then clearly we cannot be attacked if we do help Britain. And if Gen. Wood is only par-

For two years before becoming pastor of the Immaculate Conception church where he made many improvements. Father Viessers' spirit of self sacrifice was shown when he made living quarters for himself in a chicken coop and gave up the parish house to the nuns who were serving as teachers. In line with his policy of improvements, ground was broken for a new school Dec. 29, 1912, and by February of 1913 the school was ready for occupancy. On Sunday, May 11, however, fire destroyed the building and its contents. Work was begun at once on a new structure and the cornerstone was laid July 26, 1913. It was completed Nov. 5 of that year. The cornerstone of the Immaculate Conception church was laid May 31, 1923. Father Viessers celebrated the silver jubilee of his ordination March 19, 1933. He was born in Green Bay March 15, 1863.

of Italy's naval failure to command the lower Adriatic. Supply Ships Attacked. This was the first known penetration of the Adriatic by British battleships in the present war although on the night of Nov. 11-12, while British naval planes were pounding Italian warships at anchor in the battle of Taranto, a squadron of light forces was reported to have attacked an Italian convoy off Valona.

Of the four supply ships, escorted by two destroyers, one was sunk outright, two were "set seriously afire and almost certainly sunk," and the fourth, with the destroyers, escaped in the protection of a smoke screen, although one of the destroyers had been damaged, according to the admiralty account. Naval operations in support of the British offensive into Libya are continuing, the admiralty said, with the fleet air arm cooperating with the R.A.F.

"Extensive fires" have been burning in Bardia since the afternoon of Dec. 15, the admiralty said. The fires were described as having "assumed very large proportions on Dec. 17."

tricts. Volkman pointed out that in many instances repair work was first centered in Appleton because main feeder lines to rural areas were disrupted here in the city. Repairs had to be made in the city first before rural lines could be restored. Volkman reported that crews from Milwaukee, Racine, and other Wisconsin cities were still working in this area today. The power company summoned these crews because the work involved dealing with high-voltage wires. Volkman said, which demanded the experience of experts and because the most dangerous phase of the restoration work had to be done with greatest haste.

Sees Rain for Christmas. Forecaster H. A. Downs of Chicago today gave the following long-shot odds, with no guarantee, on the midwest Christmas day weather prospects: Precipitation likely in the form of rain, possibly changing to light snow in some sections.

Downs said it was too far ahead for reliable forecasting but that those conditions were indicated by the appearance of the weather map today, according to the Associated Press.

He said this week-end would be mild and dry throughout the north-central states. The extended weather forecast for the period from tonight to Christmas night follows: Great lakes: Temperature will average below normal during period. Continued mild Saturday and Sunday, falling trend remainder of period. Precipitation near average, occurring chiefly middle and latter part of period, except light rain or snow flurries Friday night and Saturday western New York.

Finland in Mourning For Death of Kallio, Former President

Helsinki, Finland —(AP)— All Finland went into mourning today for peasant-born Kyosti Kallio, who became the republic's president. Flags were half-staffed. Public dancing, singing and other entertainments were banned as marks of respect for Kallio, who died of a heart attack yesterday at a railway station as he was preparing to leave for the peace and quiet of his country estate.

Libya, during which Italian guns effectively pounded British batteries and mechanized forces, were reported today by the Italian high command. "Sharp fighting" was reported on the southern flank of the Albanian battlefield, where the Italian eleventh army is engaging Greek forces north of Argirocastro.

Steamer's Captain Gets Navy Cross

Washington —(AP)— Captain Joseph A. Gairard, who brought the S. S. City of Flint safely home from its Arctic adventures in the custody of a German prize crew, was awarded the navy cross today.

Tribute to "his skill, fine judgment and devotion to duty" was paid in President Roosevelt's citation accompanying the medal. Secretary Knox made the presentation to Gairard, who is a lieutenant commander in the naval reserve.

Besides his part in the City of Flint episode, which included detention in the Russian port of Murmansk and eventual release from German captors after then neutral Norway took a hand, Gairard was credited with helping rescue many from the sunken steamer Athenia at the start of the war.

tainments were banned as marks of respect for Kallio, who died of a heart attack yesterday at a railway station as he was preparing to leave for the peace and quiet of his country estate.

Kallio, whose illness forced him to step down from the presidency Nov. 29 after he had led Finland in her fight against Russia, was present yesterday when Prime Minister Risto Rytty was elected to fill out his unexpired term ending in 1943.

Cheered by thousands, he then went to the station, collapsed and died almost at once. His friends said the excitement and physical strain incident to his departure were contributing causes of his death. He was 67.

Minister Hopes Britain Will Get Enemy Vessels in U. S.

London —(AP)— Britain's minister of shipping today cast what he called a "covetous eye" on "a certain number of enemy ships in the United States" and declared that assignment of these and United States ships to the British service "are the only ways I can see for replenishment of our consequence."

The minister, Ronald Cross, declared that Britain's "real struggle" with Germany would come in 1941. The statements came in an interview with the American press. He pictured the submarine menace as still the greatest threat to British lifelines and said it could be overcome only by increasing numbers of destroyers and by new shipping which Britain now is turning out at her virtual maximum of production.

Germany has two vessels tied up in the United States—the 4,733-ton tanker Pauline Friedrich at Boston and the 4,353-ton Arauca at Port Everglades, Fla.

The Arauca took refuge a year ago when the British cruiser Orion intercepted her while she was trying to reach Germany from Vera Cruz, Mexico.

Italy has 27 vessels tied up on both coasts and Denmark has 37 ships laid up in this country's ports. Britain held that Danish ships acquired "an enemy character" when Germany invaded Denmark and Danish ship operators refused to turn their vessels over to the English on a charter basis after a long and bitter controversy.

The Scandinavian wireless broadcast an Oslo dispatch telling of "excitement" caused in Denmark by the possibility of United States seizure of ships and quoting the Danish press in protest. "What right has the United States as a neutral country to seize ships of another neutral country?" asked the newspaper Boersen.

The Berlingske Tidende said the measure would be a severe blow to Denmark's already-weakened merchant navy. Politiken said that such action by the United States would be unprecedented and "in absolute contradiction of international law."

Faerdeland said it would be a "cheap method" of United States aid to Britain.

May Affects Citizenship

Washington —(AP)— An informed source said today records seized at Chicago headquarters of the German-American bund yesterday will be examined by the immigration and naturalization service to see whether the membership includes any recently naturalized Americans. It was said that Attorney General Jackson had ordered the membership list checked as a possible basis for denaturalization action. The records were seized in a raid ordered by city authorities.

The bund has restricted its membership to American citizens. If naturalization of an alien was fol-

Congress Has Simple Remedy For Vetoed Bill

Lawrence Says It Can Control Bureaus By Appropriations

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington — President Roosevelt's refusal to accept the judgment of a majority of both houses of congress that correction is needed in the procedure of government bureaus, boards and commissions may lead to the writing into the forthcoming appropriation bills by congress of virtually the same restrictions.

When a chief executive vetoes a bill affecting fundamental rights of the citizen and offers no alternative remedy after a struggle of nearly two years to get the principle of fair hearing established, it creates a somewhat different situation than with the ordinary veto. It is a good deal like the complaint heard in connection with 5 to 4 decisions by the supreme court when it was argued that one man's judgment can override the will of a majority of congress in declaring laws unconstitutional.

Congress had a definite purpose in offering the Logan-Walter bill. The president's veto message raises many technical obstacles and points out defects in the proposal, but he did not tell the public that his own administration officials have blocked any reform whatsoever in administrative law and that the bill now considered extreme represented only the desire of its proponents to get something before congress for action. No amendments were offered by the administration to help this liberal reform.

Not a word was said in the president's message either about a substitute measure at the next session of congress to meet acknowledged wrongs in the present administrative procedure. This leaves the problem exactly where it was, namely on the doorstep of congress itself. It is interesting to note that Mr. Roosevelt in effect says that the citizens' rights, as viewed by a majority of both houses of congress, cannot be modified unless there is a two-thirds vote of each house. This insistence on an overwhelming majority, when the administration can control more than one-third and block action does illustrate how a dictatorship can be established among the bureaucrats through hastily written legislation by congress in the first instance.

The congress now has a simple remedy available. It is to draft the coming appropriation bills in such a way that the functions of every bureau and board and commission are definitely outlined.

This does not mean the mere attachment of riders specifying certain limitations on the use of funds from time to time, but the writing of a completely new appropriation bill for the federal commissions and boards which are usually included in what is known as the "independent offices" bill.

Congress originally conceived of these bureaus as creatures of the legislative body and not as executive agencies under the control by the chief executive. Hence congress alone can define the functions and set forth the duties. Such an appropriation bill if supported by a majority of both houses of congress is still subject to a veto, but the leverage is then all the other way—the agencies and boards and commissions are compelled to make concessions in order to get their funds instead of standing adamant against any change in their arbitrary powers.

The lawyers who drafted the Logan-Walter bill can write into a proposed appropriation bill all the items which would be normally included plus an interweaving of language that will protect the citizen's rights when he comes before these quasi-judicial and quasi-legislative boards and commissions. When the measure is offered in the house, it can be proposed as a complete substitute instead of an amendment to an appropriation bill.

Only in the last session of congress when there was objection in the house of representatives to the operations of a unit of the National Labor Relations board known as the "economic and research" division, the house insisted on its abolition and finally forced changes by action in the senate as well. The division was abandoned.

The power of the purse is one of the oldest in the history of parliament.

Party Held at School At Combined Locks

Combined Locks — A Christmas party was held by the C. L. A. C. Monday evening at the schoolhouse. An 8 o'clock dinner was served. After dinner the remainder of the evening was spent playing cards. The prize at Pinochle was won by Mrs. Clifford Jansen; at schafkopf, by Miss Frances Jusko and Mrs. Karl Piepenberg.

Gifts were exchanged. A venison lunch was served to the members of the village board Tuesday evening at Arthur Gossen's. It was given by the village attorney, Stanley A. Staidl, of Appleton.

mentary government. It is a device not often used to curb the excesses of executive boards and commissions, but it is a logical instrument when the natural method of correction has been checkedmate by the bureaucrats themselves who in this instance have prevailed on the president to use his veto power in their behalf. It was never contemplated that the presidential veto should be used to impair the will of congress on a matter of individual rights in which the citizen seeks protection against the arbitrary acts of government itself.

Vikings Add Carroll To List of Cage Victims

Second Half Assault Brings 44 to 34 Win

BY GORDON MCINTYRE

Staging two devastating attacks in the first 15 minutes of the second half, Lawrence college basketball team worked up a substantial lead on the Carroll college Pioneers here last night and then coasted to a 44 to 34 victory. It was the last game for the Vikings until after the holidays. Their first opponent then will be Beloit here, a Midwest conference game.

Lawrence turned on its first assault as the second half opened when it sank five straight baskets. In between time it garnered two points on free throws and galloped from a 17 to 16 lead to a 29 to 16 margin.

Carroll rallied at that stage and shaved several points off the margin but Fieweger, Crossett and Harvey got back the 13-point advantage and, aided and abetted by Fredrickson, worked the lead to 42 to 26. There then were five minutes of play left and Coach Arthur Denney of the Vikes chased in his substitutes who held the fort until the final bell. At one stage Denney got his firemen ready to go back into the game and had them lined up in front of the scoring table awaiting his sign. However, they weren't needed.

Superlative passing and alert ball handling—although it came in spots—was the whole story back of the Viking win. Time and again someone would maneuver himself into a position where he was out in front of his guard, a pass would be flipped his way and there were two more points on the score board. Other times it was a well-timed feint that resulted in an opening for a shot. Few Lawrence markers were ever lost.

Fieweger High Scorer
Although he had a millstone around his neck from early in the first half in the form of three personal fouls, Jimmy Fieweger of Kimberville was the scoring ace for Lawrence. He accounted for four baskets and six free throws and might have gotten more except that he was out of the game for a time in the first half and was treated rather roughly when he was in the contest. Aside from his scoring, his followup work around the bounding boards meant much to the Vikes.

Carroll pressed the Vikings badly in the first half. The game opened with Lawrence passing well but shortly an aggressive Carroll defense had it upset and then the passes went wrong. During the early minutes Lawrence did badly on tries for the hoop and Carroll no better.

It was a free throw contest for the first nine minutes with Carroll holding a slight edge. Then Fieweger scored the first basket for Lawrence, a short shot, and the score was 8-all. Carroll went ahead on a free throw but Crossett got one for Lawrence.

When Morris pushed one through the hoop with Buesing getting an assist, and followed it up with a long shot, Lawrence took a 13 to 9 lead and never was headed thereafter. The half score was 17 to 16 for the Vikes. Carroll rallying when Lawrence allowed Dalecky to drop two followup shots in a row.

Vikes Get Going
Lawrence hadn't looked any too impressive during the half but apparently straightened out a few things during the rest period. When it returned to the floor it ran up a 29 to 16 lead, let down a moment and then ran up a 42 to 26 margin.

At that point the starters were all out of the game and the Vikings showed Kirkhoff at center, Slauson and Buesing at forwards and Kneil and Lingle at the guards with Supiano finishing at one forward. Play was rather ragged and rough with Carroll trying desperately, via the fast break, to cut down the lead. When the Pioneers counted five points in about three minutes, Coach Denney had his firemen stand-by for an emergency but they weren't needed.

Notes on the Game
Despite the fact Lawrence didn't have a big lead until the last half, you never felt the Vikes would lose. As a result it wasn't the exciting game of other years—when Lawrence lost.

Ned Demming of New London was at guard for the Pioneers until he left on personal fous. He had his work cut out for him most of the evening and failed to get a basket. This is his last year with the Pioneers.

Dalecky, Carroll center, also went out on personals, and when he left the biggest Carroll threat went with him. He was potent on followup shots—when he got a chance.

Bob Morris of Lawrence got the only really long shot of the game.

Cliff Lutz Wins Bout and Trophy at U. W. Tourney

Madison—(AP)—Eighteen University of Wisconsin freshmen boxers contributed their bit toward spreading Christmas cheer last night, attracting about 2,000 cash customers to their annual contenders tournament, proceeds of which will be used to buy baskets of food for needy families.

Cliff Lutz, of Appleton, a clever and hard punching 145 pound fighter, won the coveted "best contender" trophy, a gold embossed statuette awarded annually by a Madison jeweler to the youth who, in the opinion of a committee of newspapermen, is the best sportsman and boxer. Lutz scored a technical knockout over Jack Fisher, of Superior, in the third round of the windup bout.

Another TKO, also in the third round, was scored by William Drath, of McFarland, over Nick Weber, of Sturgeon Bay, in the 175 pound match.

Results of the other bouts:
120 pounds—Eugene Dunat, Chicago, won decision over Ray Crandall, Iron River, Mich.
127 pounds—Charles Verona, Milwaukee, won decision over Henry Lee, Hilo, Hawaii.

135 pounds—Robert Oaks, Oshkosh, won decision over Don Crilly, Chicago.

145 pounds—Lloyd Bulloch, Milwaukee, won decision over Frank Hayes, Chicago.

155 pounds—Loren Marshall, Richland Center, won decision over John Newman, La Crosse.

165 pounds—Bill Richardson, Verona, won decision over Frank Riewer, Milwaukee.

Heavyweight—Royal Cass, Milwaukee, won decision over Dayton Lapham, Madison.

Referee—Joe Steinauer; Judges, Dr. Anthony Curreri and Harry Sheer.

Baseball Meeting Called at Oshkosh

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau
Oshkosh—A mass meeting to determine if local baseball fans are interested enough to enter a team in the Wisconsin State league, a Class D circuit, will be held at the Hotel Atheran here at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The outcome of tomorrow's meeting will be presented at the league meeting to be held at Appleton Sunday.

The league has had the application of Oshkosh before them for several weeks but has no taken action in admitting Oshkosh to the loop as the Oshkosh situation seemed indefinite. Sports fans here hope that the league will be expanded to eight teams for the 1941 season and that Janesville and Oshkosh may be the added teams.

It is understood here that Janesville is all ready to begin organized baseball, having lights for night games and a ball park. The Oshkosh backers have been searching for a suitable ball park site and have been considering the Winnebago county fairgrounds.

Kienitz and Getschow Top Pot-o-Gold League

POT-O-GOLD LEAGUE
Quarters W. L.
21 13 Dimes 19 17
Nickels 20 16 Pennies 12 24

Dorothy Kienitz posted a 190 game and Joyce Getschow collected a 481 series for high individual marks during women's Pot-O-Gold league matches at Y. M. C. A. alleys this week. Nickels turned in top team totals of 765 and 2,197.

Team results:
Pennies (2) 739 692 726—2157
Dimes (1) 738 710 708—2153
Nickels (2) 692 765 740—2197
Quarters (1) 686 730 752—2168

And it thrilled his old high school coach, Joe Shields, who was in the stands.

None of the Vikes went out on personals but Fieweger and Crossett had three each. Fieweger got his early, was withdrawn for part of the first half and then played the entire last half. A couple times he was in plays that resulted in miscues being called and once apparently forgot his number. As the referee called the foul and number Jimmy quickly glanced down at his jersey to see if that was his.

Referee E. J. Schneider and Bob Kolf of Oshkosh had a ragged evening. They allowed considerable traveling and their decisions on plays brought more than one loud squawk from the stands and a couple exhibitions of indignation from the players. On one occasion Kolf ruled a basket as counting but there wasn't anyone at the scoring table who could swear the ball went through the hoop—but neither could they swear it didn't. Several spectators later stated there was no basket.

Bill Crossett, Viking starting forward, took a tumble down the Con-way hotel steps about 6 o'clock last evening and suffered a leg bruise which appeared to bother him. That's why Denney took him out in the first half. However, things didn't go any better so Bill went back into the game and remained there.

Illinois Faces Pittsburgh '5'

Only Four Teams in Big 10 Undeclared; Purdue Meets DePaul

Chicago—(AP)—The Big Ten, its number of undefeated members reduced to four by non-conference foes this week, encounters another trying basketball assignment to-night when Illinois takes on Pittsburgh and Purdue plays DePaul of Chicago. All four clubs have clean slates.

A third Big Ten representative, Chicago, will be host to North Central. The Maroons have split in two starts.

Illinois, to achieve its second triumph, must stop a fancy passing attack which Pittsburgh used effectively in launching its season against Wisconsin Wednesday. Purdue, winner of four straight games in which it has averaged 56 points, runs into a De Paul five that also has won four in a row, three games by 50 point scores or better.

In addition to Wisconsin, Northwestern also met its first setback this week and last night Michigan ran the string to three by losing to Notre Dame, 37 to 27. The Irish led their taller Michigan foes all the way for their fourth triumph in five games. It was Michigan's third game.

The Big Ten's only other unbeaten quints now are Indiana and Iowa. Both resume action tomorrow when Indiana faces Stanford at San Francisco in its opener on the west coast and Iowa goes to Detroit.

Other games Saturday send Michigan to Butler, Minnesota to Nebraska, Ohio State to Michigan State, Purdue to Loyola, and Wisconsin to Milwaukee to face Marquette. Northwestern is the only conference team at home, meeting Pittsburgh.

Odessa, Tex. — Babe Hunt, 195, Oklahoma City, outpointed Babe Ritchie, 210, Lubbock, Tex., (10).

Topnotch Bowlers To Roll Against Varipapa Tonight

Among topnotch bowlers of Appleton and vicinity who will roll against Andy Varipapa, master kegler and trick shot artist, at 10:30 tonight at Elks alleys are Jerry Lamers of Little Chute, Harold Meltz of Twelve Corners, Roman Fahrback of Menasha. Varipapa is giving free instruction at the alleys this afternoon.

Tonight's show is scheduled at 10:30 so that bowlers rolling in leagues tonight will be able to take it in and also to accommodate those who want to do some Christmas shopping earlier in the evening. The event is under the joint sponsorship of the Elks club and the Appleton Bowling association.

Marquette Will be Playing First Home Game of the Season

Milwaukee—(AP)—Coach Bud Foster's University of Wisconsin basketball team will invade the Milwaukee Auditorium tomorrow night to face the Marquette University five for the second time this season.

It will be Marquette's first home game of the year.

The Badgers racked up a 38 to 32 victory over Marquette in a Madison game two weeks ago.

Wisconsin has won three games and lost one this season, while Marquette has dropped three straight.

Marquette ticket officials estimate that more than 6,000 fans will be on hand to see big Bill Koenich, 210-pound Hilltop guard, and Johnny Kotz, Foster's prize sophomore forward, lead their respective teams to battle.

Chandler has been grooming Bob Rosendahl, 6 foot 2 inch sophomore, to take the place of Matt Reichl, second string center, benched with an ankle injury suffered in the Creighton game.

Madison—(AP)—Ten members of the University of Wisconsin basketball squad will leave here today for Milwaukee where they will meet Marquette in a return engagement at the Auditorium tomorrow night.

Wisconsin defeated the Hilltoppers, 38 to 32, in the first engagement here Dec. 7.

The travelling squad chosen by Badger Coach Harold (Bud) Foster includes: Forwards, Johnny Kotz, Charles Epperson, Ray Lenheiser and Warren Schrage; guards, Bob Alwin, Ted Strain, Fred Rehm and Ed Schiewe; centers, Gene Englund and Don Timmerman.

John Fitzpatrick Enters Cue Tourney

Chicago—(AP)—The National Billiard association said today that John Fitzpatrick of Los Angeles, Pacific coast cue champion, would compete in the 1941 three cushion championship billiard tournament opening a 26-day stand here Jan. 13.

Fitzpatrick's entry increased the field in the $20,000 cue classic to 15 players. Willie Hoppe of New York will defend the crown he won last year by sweeping 20 games.

Y. M. C. A. Bowling Leagues To Clash in Special Matches

Supplanting regular competition, the National and American Y.M.C.A. bowling leagues will engage in intra-league matches during the holiday bowling lull. Teams of the two leagues will be battling for the Y.M.C.A. championship and a trophy which will be awarded at the spring banquet.

The Y.M.C.A. is donating individual awards for members of the team shooting the highest gross team series. The championship league will be decided on the basis of total pins. Handicaps for the special event will be figured on the basis of 185 scratch and 75 per cent of the difference between scratch and the individual average. Pairings were made according to corresponding rankings as of the week ending Dec. 14.

The schedule: Monday, Dec. 23, 7 o'clock, Tusler Motor Company versus Utschig Dairy, 9 o'clock, Heckert Shoes versus Cary Oil Burners; Thursday, Dec. 26, 7 o'clock, Petersen Press versus Retson and Jimos, 9 o'clock, Sears Roebuck versus Odd Fellows; Monday, Dec. 30, 7 o'clock, Nolan Insurance versus Knoke Lumber, 9 o'clock Patterson Co. versus Gordon's Ice Cream; Thursday, Jan. 2, 7 o'clock, Club Barbers versus Auto Body Works, 9 o'clock, Wolf Shoes versus Big Dippers.

FRIDAY'S GAMES
East at Oshkosh.
Fond du Lac at West.
North at Manitowoc.
Appleton at Central.

Appleton High school basketball team clashes with the team picked to take the conference title this season, when it meets Sheboygan Central at Sheboygan tonight. The teams are undefeated in conference play; each has two wins.

Height, experience and ability to pass the ball around the floor are the biggest attributes of the Central quintet. Their height is the biggest handicap for the Terrors who probably can match them in everything else.

Appleton's starting lineup will show the same five boys who have started recent games. Burton and Kliefoth will be at the guards, Cooper at center, and Bartman and Bowers at forwards.

In the other conference games, East goes to Oshkosh and probably will lose; Fond du Lac invades West and looks like a winner; and North goes to Manitowoc with a trimming due.

Army Without Grid Coach as Bill Wood Is Ordered to Duty

West Point, N. Y.—(AP)—The United States Military Academy is the newest contributor to football's rumor foundry, now that the Army has called Captain Bill Wood from coaching the cadet gridgers to active service with the 1st Cavalry at Fort Bliss, Texas.

Strongest of the reports was that the academy athletic board would strike a compromise by continuing its graduate-coaching policy but taking that graduate from civilian ranks. This would narrow the field to such candidates as Bill Jones of Rose Bowl-bound Nebraska, who already has said he's happy at Lincoln; Major Bob Neyland of Sugar Bowl-bound Tennessee, and Earl Blaik of Dartmouth.

Wood, whose new orders will put him on a California-bound transport out of New York Feb. 6, coached the Army teams for three years, in which they won 12 of 28 games.

Tip-Offs on Good Basketball 3: Ball Handling

BY CLAIR BEE

Long Island University Coach. There's still one big phase of basketball to think about before we get into shooting. It is ball-handling—and don't think for a moment it isn't every bit as important as banging away at that basket.

The No. 1 rule in ball-handling is "DON'T FIGHT THE BALL." Don't grab at it, just pick it out of the air when it comes at you. Watch a passed ball intently and follow it with your eyes until it reaches your hands. Then let it slide into your fingers, allowing your hands to give enough to take the shock of the ball's speed. From the time it starts toward you until you have passed it on, think of the ball as a part of you.

Remember that accuracy comes first, then speed. Start practicing short passes and learn a number of different passes so that you can throw from any angle. The straight pass from the chest is most used.

Here are some passing don'ts: Don't pass to a teammate's back; don't pass laterally across the floor; don't hold the ball—keep it moving; don't try fancy passes; don't pass the ball across in front of your opponent's basket.

Ossie Schechtman, L. I. U. star, shows how the ball is held for the simple chest pass.

Michigan Star Was First, Second or Third in 7 Divisions

Seattle—(AP)—Tom Harmon, Michigan's all-America halfback, ranked first, second or third in seven of the nine statistical tables compiled on middle western football teams by the American Football Statistical Bureau for its forthcoming annual yearbook.

The departing "No. 98" left his cleat marks high in the lists which include gridiron deeds of more than 100 gridgers from 13 "major" mid-west schools. Here's what he did:

Led in total offense, scoring and punt returns; was second in rushing and returning kickoffs; third in punting and forward passing, and ninth in returning pass interceptions. Only division in which Harmon didn't figure prominently was catching passes—he apparently was too busy throwing 'em.

It was the second straight year of leadership for Harmon in total offense and scoring. It took a new naional and middle west rushing mark by Detroit's Al Ghesquiere—957 yards on 146 attempts in nine games—to prevent Harmon from repeating in that classification.

Other repeaters were Indiana's Hal Hursh whose 53 completions made him the forward passing leader and whose five pass interceptions gave him leadership in that division, and Don Vosberg of Marquette who again led the forward pass receivers, both in the number of passes caught and yards gained.

Scott Best Punter
Don Scott of Ohio State, second in punting last year, moved up to first with a 42.34 average. Scott also converted 11 tries-for-point in as many attempts. Last year he converted 13 of 15, giving him a two-year record of 24 out of 26.

Harmon's 1,346 yards from passing and rushing was 10 yards under his 1,356 total of last year. His rushing figure of 844 yards was also under his 1939 figure of 868.

Triple Tie in Open Is Golf Feature

BY DILLON GRAHAM

New York—The big score-board at Cleveland showed three low scores of 287 as the National Open ended last June and golfing sentimentalists were divided in their backing.

Some were pulling for Gene Sarazen, the stocky little veteran who had won the Open nearly two decades before, to lack a perfect playoff finish on his grand comeback.

Others were on burly Lawson Little's side. The youngster with the fullback physique had dominated the amateur ranks but had little success as a pro. He had kept battling though, and now he had his big chance.

First of a Series

Many sympathized with Ed (Porky) Oliver, whom they considered the victim of a bad break. Porky, virtually an unknown fat boy, had come out of nowhere to join in the triple-tie. But because he had started his final round ahead of schedule he was disqualified. The unfortunate situation made Oliver an overnight sports page figure and he cashed in for more in exhibitions than he would have made by winning the Open.

Little outscored Sarazen by three strokes in the playoff to become one of the few winners of both the Open and amateur championships.

Chapman Wins Easily
The amateur championship was a romp for Dick Chapman, a well-to-do young New Yorker who had spent most of his life on the links. After winning the qualifying round medal he had to come from behind to win one match but the others were easy. In the final he dealt W. B. McCullough, Philadelphia "week-end golfer," one of the worst defeats in amateur history 11 and 9. Bud Ward, defending champion, was beaten in an early round.

BYRON NELSON

Of all the 1939 crown-winners only pretty Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Texas, repeated. She whipped Jane Cochran of Greenville, S. C. in the national finals, 6 and 5. Patty Berg, who would have been a co-favorite with Miss Jameson, could not compete. She had turned professional a short while before. Miss Jameson won the western women's, Elizabeth Hicks of California took the western women's derby and Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias won the western women's open.

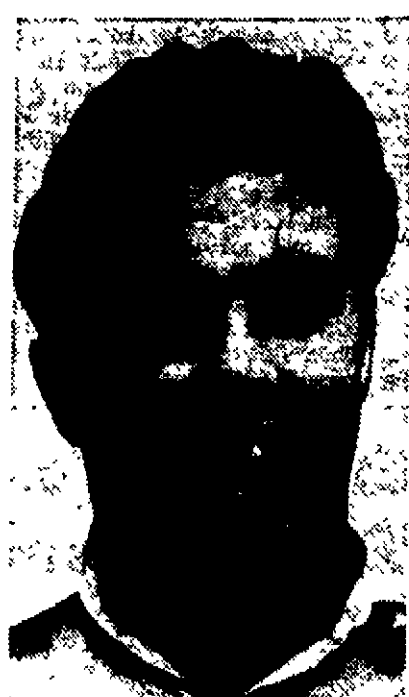

Nelson Takes PGA
The professional golfer's title went to Byron Nelson of Toledo, loser in a 37-hole duel with Henry Picard in the 1939 event. Nelson, 1939 Open champion, scored a one-up triumph over Sammy Snead. Picard lost to Sarazen, who staged another of his gallant comeback stands, and Gene finally was eliminated by Snead when the tiring Sarazen lost his advantage in the closing holes.

Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret were other 1940 top standouts. Hogan won three North Carolina tournaments in a row and capped the Goodall round-robin. Demaret won six tournaments more than any other golfer. His triumphs included the Augusta Masters and the Western Open, but he played so badly in the National Open that he picked up Hogan failed even to qualify for the Open but gained an alternate's admission when Amateur Frank Strafaci withdrew in his favor.

Wood Sets Record
Craig Wood set a new low 72-hole medal play score of 264 in winning the Metropolitan Open and paired with Bill Burke to take the International 4-ball tourney at Coral Gables, Fla. War caused cancellation of the British championships and the Ryder Cup competitions. But a "Ryder Cup team" captained by Walter Hagen beat Sarazen's challenging team.

DICK CHAPMAN

Any possibility that a foreign contender would win the U. S. amateur was blighted when Jim Ferrier, Australian champion, was ruled ineligible because of a golf book he had written. Bud Ward won the western amateur, F. Dixon Brooke of Virginia won the Intercollegiate championship, Sam Snead took the Canadian Open and Bob Clark of St. Paul took the National Public Links crown.

Pegler Wants Ickes Refugee Plan Held Up for Another Look

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—Now, I will admit that I have not had time to make a careful investigation of Harold Ickes' proposal to import to the Virgin Islands "as visitors," but "without visas or diplomatic formalities," a large mass of political refugees from Spain, Germany and Italy who are now trapped in unoccupied France and who may face extermination.

But Ickes obviously is trying to pull a fast one, and I suggest that his plan be held up until this country has had a chance to study the background of the case and learn something about the character of the refugees.

There would be no serious objection to the admission of persons who are real believers in the American way of government and American liberties. That is the kind of people who made the United States. But under no circumstances should the gates be opened for a mass importation of communists, plus a scattering of Nazi and Fascist military spies and industrial and political saboteurs, even though these people be represented as "intellectuals" or "artists."

"My own department," said Ickes in a speech last week, "is doing what lies within its power to open the way."

In this connection it is certainly fair and important to consider the fact that Mr. Ickes' idea of an appropriate man for the position of secretary of the Virgin Islands is Robert Morris Lovett and to take a look at Mr. Lovett's reputation.

This is what Martin Dies has to say about Mr. Lovett:

"Robert Morris Lovett, appointed by the president to the Virgin Islands, comes close to holding the all-time record for fellow-traveling with communist organizations in this country."

Representative Dies then gives a long list of organizations with which Prof. Lovett has been connected, including the American Friends of Spanish Democracy, the New Masses, the Committee to Save Spain and China, the American League Against War and Fascism, the American League for Peace and Democracy, the Nonpartisan Committee for the Re-election of Representative Vito Marcantonio, the National Mooney Council of Action, the Golden Book of American

Clintonville Bethel Has Its First Public Installation Rites

Clintonville—A large crowd of parents and friends attended the first open installation of Clintonville Bethel No. 26 of Job's Daughters on Thursday evening at the Masonic temple. Those inducted to office were: Jean Hagen, honored queen; Shirley Seidel, senior princess; Marjorie Stieg, junior princess; Geneva Kuckuk, guide; Hope Martin, marshal; Jeanne Krause, Doris Schmidt, Marion Peterson, Jean Rand and Dorothea Wilfson, the five messengers; Mary Beth Rogers, chaplain; Gloria Block, musician; Joan Stein, librarian; Margaret Fritz, recorder; Phyllis Bovey, treasurer; Geraldine Bovey, senior custodian; Beverly Darling, junior custodian; Edythe Cleveland, inner guard; and Ruth Ellen Giersbach, outer guard.

Mary Esmay, the retiring honored queen, was the installing officer with Mary Beyers and Dixie Wulka as the installing guide and marshal. Jean Stett, installing chaplain, Marjorie Kemmer and Virginia Nelson also assisted in the ceremonial work. A past officer's pin was presented to Miss Esmay, who has the distinction of having served as the first honored queen of the Clintonville Bethel.

After the formalities, a reading, "As the Herons Fly" was given by Shirley Seidel and a piano solo was rendered by Gloria Block. At the close of the meeting, a lunch was served in the dining room where the tables were decorated in keeping with the Christmas season.

The next meeting of Job's Daughters will be held at the temple on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 28. Members of the guardian council are: Mrs. J. H. Stein, Roy Martin, Mrs. Fred Holmes, Mrs. Arthur Giersbach and Howard Bovey, who are members of the Eastern Star and Masonic lodges.

Pole Falls Onto Car, Girls Slightly Hurt

Willis Schuler, 30, Combined Locks, and his daughter, Patricia, 9, narrowly escaped serious injury about 6 o'clock last night when a utility pole fell against the car as he was driving on Candee street. He was driving west at the time, according to a report given police. The little girl suffered a bump on the head and Schuler was uninjured.

Sunday school will be held at 11 o'clock. On Christmas eve there will be a children's program by the Sunday school at 7:30, and on Christmas day the English service will be at 10 o'clock. On Second Christmas day, Thursday, the German service will take place at 10:30.

A Christmas service with holy communion is scheduled for 2 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon at St. John Evangelical church, town of Cicero. A program by the Sunday school will be presented at 7:30 in the evening, the title to be "Christmas Candles."

The Methodist church at Black Creek will have morning service at 9:15 Sunday and church school at 10:30. A Christmas program will be given by the church school at 7:45 Sunday evening.

Pupils in Program

"Reason Versus Love" is the theme of the sermon to be given at the 10:30 service Sunday morning at St. John Evangelical church, Black Creek. Sunday school will be at 9:30. A Christmas eve service will take place at 7:30 Tuesday night with the choir and congregation taking part. Recitations and songs will be given by the Sunday school pupils. A Christmas service with holy communion will take place at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Divine service at Bethlehem Lutheran church, Hortonville, will be held in English at 9:30 Sunday morning and in German at 10:45. There will be a Christmas eve program at 7:30 Tuesday night, and an English service at 9:30 Wednesday morning. On Thursday, Second Christmas day, a German service will be held at 9:30 in the morning. Announcements for holy communion will be taken Friday afternoon and evening, Dec. 27.

Community Baptist church, Hortonville, will have its Christmas service at 11 o'clock Sunday morning with a sermon by the pastor, the Rev. L. T. Foreman, on the theme, "The Shepherd's Journey to Bethlehem." The junior choir will sing a selection and the church choir will give "And the Glory of the Lord" and "The Lord is Born." During the church school period at 10 o'clock the lesson will be on "Sharing the Shepherd's Joy." The church school Christmas entertainment will take place at 7:30 Tuesday night when a program will be given and gifts will be distributed. The offering will be taken for world relief.

Program by Club

The Current Topics club of Community Baptist church will have its Christmas program and softball game at 8 o'clock Monday night, and choir rehearsals will take place Wednesday night.

English services at Immanuel Lutheran church, town of Cicero, will be held at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, after which rehearsal for the Christmas program will be held. The Christmas eve service will begin at 7:45 Tuesday night.

Midnight mass will be celebrated in some of the Catholic churches in small communities around Appleton. There will be midnight mass at St. Mary church, Black Creek, and at St. Denis church, Shiocton, while other masses on Christmas day will be at 8:30 in the morning at St. Lawrence church, Navarino, 9:30 and 10 o'clock in St. Mary church, Black Creek, and 10 o'clock at St. Denis church, Shiocton. Sunday masses will be at 8:30 at St. Mary church and 10 o'clock at St. Denis church.

St. Paul Lutheran church, Stephenville, will have services at 8:45 Sunday morning.

State Milk Prices Exceed 1939 Levels

Wisconsin milk prices averaged 13 per cent higher for the first 11 months of this year compared with 1939, according to a crop reporting service bulletin received at the office of J. F. Magnus, county agricultural agent. Milk production also has been higher.

From the low point of $1.26 a hundredweight during May and June of this year, milk prices have risen to $1.55, the average for November. This is two cents more than the November 1939 average. The average milk price for the first 11 months of this year was $1.38 compared with $1.22 for the same period of last year.

Milk production on Wisconsin farms has been at a higher level this year with a slightly larger number of milk cows and a greater production per cow than reported in 1939.

The figure at $8 a ton on board cars as compared with $15 for bituminous coal selling at points west of the Cascade mountains. The equipment for grinding, pressing, and redistilling the wood is expensive, however, and is only profitable in the very large plants.

374 Dairy, Quality Production Demonstrations Made in State

More than 85,000 persons witnessed 374 dairy foods and quality production demonstrations of Wisconsin 4-H club members during 1940, according to a summary released by the state department of agriculture to J. F. Magnus, Outagamie county agent.

Demonstrations on further use of dairy products and on quality production were presented before numerous local and county groups. Greater use of dairy products in the diet was stressed before women's clubs, mothers' leagues, parent-teacher associations, church groups, teachers meetings, older youth groups and farm security groups.

Demonstration teams have carried their story to the public at breed association picnics and banquets, dairy week in Outagamie Co. and Green Bay, cheese day in Monroe, dairy day at Kaukauna, county dairy day celebrations throughout

Check Clover Seed Prices For 70 Years

Seek Most Important Factors Determining Prices Received

To determine under what conditions it would pay Wisconsin farmers to hold their clover seed crop until spring and the most important factors determining the prices received, F. V. Beck and W. H. Ebling in cooperation with the state and federal departments of agriculture have analyzed farm prices of clover seed from 1870 to 1940.

Ebling and his coworkers have found that clover seed prices tend to fluctuate a great deal, partly in response to changes in the size of the United States crop. Because clover seed has a relatively high value per pound, making it practical to ship it long distances, it is the size of the entire American crop not that of Wisconsin alone which makes the difference.

"The general level of commodity prices—reflecting prosperity or 'hard times'—has an even greater effect on clover seed prices than does the size of crop," concludes Ebling. "In a depression, not even a small crop keeps prices up, probably because in times of stress many farmers either buy less seed or use more of the cheaper grasses instead of clover."

Ebling and Beck believe that the two factors of crop size and general price level also are most important in determining whether it pays to hold clover seed until spring before selling it. They have observed that if the crop is small and the price level high, then clover seed prices generally rise between October and March—sometimes as much as 25 per cent. But in the 1930-1932 depression period, when the general price level was declining, prices of seed actually fell an average of 13 per cent during these months.

4-H Members Get $25,000 on Sales of Calves

250 Sires Raised by Young Dairymen Were Sold During Autumn

County 4-H and FFA sales of production bred dairy sires this fall brought $25,000 to young Wisconsin dairymen, according to a Wisconsin college of agriculture bulletin received at the office of J. F. Magnus, county agricultural agent.

This was revealed in a report of 11 sales held in the state during October and November. One of the sales was in Outagamie county and another in Winnebago.

Approximately 250 sires, which had been raised as 4-H FFA projects during the last year, were sold through these county auctions, according to A. O. Collettine of the college. Collettine reported that the top prices paid for the sires ranged from $175 to $190.

The sales were sponsored by breed associations and county agricultural committees. In a number of the counties, local business groups also aided in sponsoring the calf projects. In nearly all instances the bull calves offered at the auctions were from dams with known dairy herd improvement association records of 300 pounds or more of butterfat a year and in a number of instances from dams with advanced registry records.

Calves raised in these projects and offered for sale usually were selected by committees of local breeders and by the county agent. The 4-H club member or FFA member accepting such a calf as his project agreed, as his part of the arrangement, to consign his calf to the sale to be held in his county in the fall of the year.

U. S. Also Can Turn Wood Into Fuel, Sugar

Washington—(P)—Should the need arise, American chemists could match Germans in turning wood into such essential products as motor fuel, edible sugars and synthetic "wool" and "cotton," a forestry authority declared today.

C. F. Winslow, director of the forest products laboratory of the United States Forest Service at Madison, Wis., discussed the defense value of a bountiful supply of forest products in a speech for delivery at the annual meeting of the Society of American Foresters.

Urging increased consumption of dairy products, demonstration teams had a wide list of outstanding subjects, among which were the following: milk custards, accent on cheese, milk drinks, dairy school luncheons, American cheese in every course, dairy breakfasts, dairy supper, dressing up ice cream, dairy bar refreshments, making and using cottage cheese, cheese soups, butter horn rolls, ice cream the all-American dessert, butter-made pies, uses of Swiss cheese and uses of dairy desserts.

The state-wide dairy demonstration program was sponsored by the state department of agriculture co-operating with the 4-H club department and the dairy industry department of the college of agriculture.

Chemists Lengthen List of B Vitamins

The parade of B vitamins continues. Last year Wisconsin scientists reported that dogs need at least five vitamins of the B complex. Now biochemists, delving into the mysteries of nutrition, find that the number is seven, according to a bulletin received by County Agent J. F. Magnus.

The vitamins which work of the past year has shown dogs require are pantothenic acid and one other factor which is still unnamed. The other five are thiamin, riboflavin, nicotinic acid, vitamin B6 and factor W.

On an experimental ration used by J. M. McKibbin and C. A. Elvehjem, of the University of Wisconsin, young dogs grew rapidly for two weeks, but then declined. A concentrate of pantothenic acid brought an immediate and lasting improvement. When pure synthetic pantothenic acid became available, it was tried, but produced only a temporary response. This indicated the preparation used before had contained some other needed vitamin in addition to pantothenic acid. Further work uncovered other evi-

Taking of Christmas Trees Can be Benefit to Forests

Milwaukee—(P)—This year more than 10,000,000 Christmas trees will be sold in the United States to be decorated in homes during the yuletide season, a custom which has come down from the Romans.

This year too, the question will be raised whether or not this practice is contrary to the conservation lessons Uncle Sam has been teaching his nieces and nephews for many years.

According to Jay H. Price, regional forester for the United States Forest Service, Milwaukee, the cutting of Christmas trees can benefit the forest by thinning out the smaller trees, which become mighty big when decorated in a living room.

dence for the existence of a new factor, but has not proceeded far enough to reveal much of its nature. It seems to be closely related to pantothenic acid, since it exists in the same liver fractions as that vitamin, and like it is readily destroyed with alkali.

To obtain tall, clean timber, many seedlings must be planted to the acre, Price explained. In this way the lower branches are shaded and killed, and the trees are forced to grow in height. As they mature, however, they must be thinned out. A Christmas tree between six and eight feet tall is about 20 years old, if it is permitted to grow normally, the forester said.

Geographical variations throughout the nation have an effect on the tree commonly used. In the lake states it is either a balsam or spruce usually, and the same is true in New England. However, elsewhere practically all kinds of evergreens are used.

The Lodgepole pine and Douglas fir are popular in Colorado, while in Maryland, Virginia and Washington the scrub pine takes a trimming at yuletide. In other localities, northern whitepine, southern pine, hemlock, red and white cedar and redwood are used in varying numbers.

Price pointed out that conservation, as Uncle Sam teaches it, is wise use, and added that the use of trees, of any kind, to spread happiness among children at Christmas time is very wise indeed.

How to Buy a Tree

Milwaukee—(P)—There's more to selecting a Christmas tree than just laying your money on the line if you want one that will last throughout the holidays, according to H. Basil Wales, assistant United States regional forester in charge of timber management.

Offering a few tips to prospective tree buyers, Wales said a slight shaking will give a pretty good indication as to the length of time a tree has been cut. If the needles fall, try another, he advised.

"If you want to keep your tree for several weeks, pick a balsam. They hold their needles longer when set up inside."

On the other hand, he pointed out that a spruce usually has more cones and are best if you like a touch of nature's own decorations.

"Keep your tree outdoors until you are ready to put it up," he said. "Then place the butt in water to keep it from drying out."

Women Should Cultivate Happy Philosophy of Life

BY DOROTHY DIX

Now when the world is drenched in tears and blood and when the future seems so dark and bleak, women need as they never have before, some philosophy of life from which they can draw strength and comfort, and which ties together all of this bungling business we call living and make sense of it and justifies it. And, unfortunately, not many of us have the long-range vision that enables us to see the pathway we must tread as a whole. We cannot look beyond the next turn of the road. That is why there are so many peevish, fretful women; why there are so many women who bog down in chronic listlessness and unhappiness. They need something to shake them out of their apathy, something to solace them in their disappointments, something to rally their fainting spirits, something to make them realize that if weeping comes with the night rejoicing comes with the morning. And the only way they can meet this need is by cultivating a philosophy that will enable them to accept life as it comes, and make the most of it. Now not every crutch fits the same shoulder. Every woman must make her own. And if she wants it to bear her weight when she most needs its support she must fashion it out of things as they are, instead of things as she would like to have them. Wishful thinking is the curse of the feminine sex. Millions of women spend their lives in torment because they long to be what they can never be, and to have things that are forever out of their reach.

The basis of every woman's philosophy of life should consist in cutting her garments according to her cloth, as the old proverb puts it. Let her once realize that she is no glamor girl; that no talent scout will ever discover her and bear her off to Hollywood to get a million-dollar salary; that no Fairy Prince is ever going to come riding down her street, and she has looked her passage for the islands of the Blest.

She has kissed Old Man Trouble good-by. She has eliminated the hopeless struggle to be beautiful though homely. She is no longer tormented by ambitions that she lacks the talent to realize. And she can marry the corner grocer instead of being an old maid, waiting for the millionaire who never comes. Happiness is Home-Made.

The next thing that women should remember in formulating their philosophy of life is that happiness is a home-made product. It doesn't come put up in cans and it isn't for sale over the counter.

Every woman must roll her own. She will be happy, or unhappy, as she wills herself to be, for happiness is mostly self-hypnosis and she will be what she thinks herself to be.

She can drown in tears of self-pity, or laugh off her troubles and be the life of her own party. It is up to every individual mother's daughter of us whether we will be jolly bet or sobbing Sue.

A woman's philosophy of life includes contentment with her lot which, like happiness, is also a home brew which each of us must make for ourselves in our own souls out of common sense and courage.

Needlessly Miserable
Half of the women in the world are needlessly miserable because they make themselves so. They cultivate a dislike for some place in which they have to live, or the work they have to do until they turn a minor unpleasantness into a tragedy that wrecks their happiness.

The place, however, where women most need some philosophy to sustain them is in marriage, for no marriage ever comes up to a young girl's expectations of what it is going to be. Even the best of husbands are hard to live with.

Every child is a combination of brat and angel that makes its mother think upon occasion that it was a mistake to have saved it. Every wife has her times and seasons, when she is tired and overworked and discouraged, when she envies her bachelor girl friends who have jobs and pay envelopes and cats instead of husbands, and when she wonders why she ever was fool enough to get herself into the domestic mess.

What Woman Teaches
Then it is she needs to hold fast to the knowledge that she has chosen the greatest career that any woman ever fills, and that she is doing the most important work that any woman ever does in the world.

Then she needs to remember for her comfort that the woman architect draws pretty pictures of houses, but she makes the homes on which civilization rests; that the woman novelist invents stories about imaginary people, but she holds real palpitating life in her hands; that the woman politician

Defender Is Helpless in Squeeze Play

BY ELY CULBERTSON

There are two types of plays which expert defenders fear above all others. One of them is the squeeze. In this case their fear is well founded. They realize that, with conditions exactly right, the declarer has them at his mercy. The other feared play, however, often has hidden doors thru which an agile defender may escape. I refer to the throw-in play. Consider the extraordinary efforts made by West in today's hand.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 heart Pass 1 spade Pass
2 no trump Pass 3 spades Pass
3 no trump Pass Pass

North had a close question to decide over the three no trump bid. He felt that four spades might be a safer contract, but naturally feared that nine tricks might be the limit of the combined hands. I am not inclined to criticize the pass to three no trump.

West opened the jack of diamonds. Declarer won with the king and laid down the ace of spades. At this point West made the first of his remarkable series of "exits." He rapidly analyzed that the one chance of defeating the contract depended on East's gaining the lead for a diamond play thru the declarer's marked honor. If declarer had both the ace and jack of spades, the sacrifice of the king would do no good and, indeed, would actually cost a trick, but this was unimportant compared with the possibility that East might hold the spade jack and be able to use it for entry. Thus, West's play of the spade king on the ace was extremely well calculated.

But declarer had a few tricks up his own sleeve. The spade king falling on the ace, it became apparent that dummy's suit could not be established without letting East, the danger hand, on lead, so he crossed to dummy's queen of spades, cashed the heart ace, and then led a club to his own ace, after which he cashed the king.

Again West rose to the occasion. He saw that a third round of clubs would force him on lead with the queen and leave him in the unenviable position of having to return a heart or a diamond from his respective honors. Rather than face this extremity, he deliberately dropped the queen of clubs on declarer's king.

Declarer cashed the jack of clubs and made one more effort to thrust West on lead by laying down the heart king, intending to follow up with a low heart. But since West had already jettisoned his honors in spades and clubs, he did not mind going a little further. Again he sidestepped, by playing the heart queen on declarer's king.

After that declarer was thru. He could not make a move without putting West on lead for his long diamonds, or East on lead to cash his side suit tricks and then to lead a diamond thru to his partner's suit.

Answer: It seems to me that if they put "their daughter" in quotation it would answer the purpose. I have never seen this done but I think it would perfectly explain that they call you "daughter" and think of you as their daughter.

SANTA GIANT-KILLER

BY SIGRID ARNE

THE STORY SO FAR: Twice Eric, a fisherman's son, has made dangerous trips to find where an ugly giant hides his heart. He must find the heart to break the spell the giant has cast on the kingdom of the good, gray Queen.

Chapter Seventeen

A Handsome Prince Is Released

Eric's horse turned his head toward the North. He flew through the blue sky, dipped down through pink clouds, and then he flew into great, gray clouds. Lightning pierced the clouds around them. Three times the lightning singled the wings of Eric's horse.

Soon the horse could scarcely lift his wings. He began to float toward the earth. But instead of fields below there was the angry ocean. Eric quickly pulled out his sea shell. It flew from his hand to the water and became a fine white boat. Eric and his horse settled down on its deck and it sped through the dark grey storm until they saw ahead a low, cone-like mountain rising straight out of the sea.

On its top was a circle of flame reaching into the sky. The sea shell stopped at the mountain's side and Eric whispered to his horse. "Now fly up over those flames and drop me inside the circle."

The horse rose through the air. He circled the flames on the mountain top and Eric could see below that the top was like a platform. In the center stood a great stone table and on it lay a great, black heart. Beside the table sat an ugly troll with long yellow teeth.

Whole Mountain Shakes
Eric's horse dropped down beside the table. In a twinkling Eric had drawn his bow and shot an arrow straight into the great black heart. As he did it there was an ear-splitting clap of thunder. The mountain shook like a leaf in a storm for a full five minutes. And then there was dead silence.

In place of the troll stood a handsome young man who bowed to Eric and said, "At last some one has set me free. The giant is dead. My kingdom is yours. If I still have one, I have been here a hundred years."

Eric laughed, "No, keep the kingdom. But ride with me and we will go to the castle of the good, gray Queen."

"That I should like to do some day," said the young man. "But I must hasten to my own kingdom: and find my two brothers. They were also turned into trolls."

"Trolls?" said Eric. "Could they have been those that guarded the castle behind the East Wind and the Iron Mountain?"

"I don't know," said the young man. "But we three were princes. I was the oldest. We were taken prisoner by the giant without a heart because we tried to shoot him one day. He had killed the most beautiful nightingale that sang every evening outside our mother's window."

Eric thought as the young man spoke. He knew he must hurry to return to Santa before Christmas Eve. But he also wanted to help the young man. Finally he said, "Come, I will help you find your brothers." The two young men mounted Eric's winged horse and Eric said, "Take us first to the Iron Mountain and then to the castle behind the East Wind."

Fire Disappears

Just then Eric noticed something queer. The wall of fire had disappeared. Only a circle of black coals showed where the wall had been. He leaped down and picked up one coal and threw it to his new friend. But as the coal flew through the air it burst into flames again. It fell to the ground and another wall of flame leaped up.

Eric and his new friend watched in astonishment.

"Gracious," laughed Eric. "I'm glad you didn't catch that coal. But I wish the flames would die down. I don't quite like to leave a fire here."

As he spoke the flames fell to earth and there was just a circle of black coals on the ground.

"Well," said Eric. "This looks like something we can use. I shall take one of these coals with me." He put one carefully into his saddle bag, and then mounted his horse again, and the two young men flew through the air to the Iron Mountain.

Whiny Child May be in Weak Physical Condition

BY ANGELO PATRI

A child's first word is a cry. It is a cry of protest against a world that feels cold and unfriendly to his tender skin, and it is his only way of asking for help. No tears come with that cry. Later, as his knowledge of this world broadens and deepens, he learns that tears, added to his cries, bring help and comfort and indulgence beyond his hopes. This is the time that his tears must be proven ineffectual. Now or never, he must learn that tears will bring him nothing that a smile would not bring sooner and in better spirit.

A whining, crying child is a nuisance to himself and to other people. Soon he cannot see another person without beginning his moans and turning on the tears. "I want—Gimme—Don't—Won't"—and tears and tears. Every protest brings fresh tears. Somebody in desperation hands him something to appease him and win relief.

Causes Are Many

If you have a crying child search for the cause of his tears in his physical condition. Malnutrition which brings a constant hunger is one sure cause for tears; fatigue is another; broken routine, a consequent feeling of insecurity, another; lack of attention and affection will bring on tears; in the same way the tyrannical ones cry. The difference is plain. The crying habit is usually acquired by children who are not of robust character. They are not strong, not given to hearty outdoor play. They like to stay close to their mothers, have no initiative and are pining for something to do. They are a problem to busy mothers and they must be disciplined and trained to self-control, at least to the extent where they do not bother everybody within hearing.

Give them regular hours; regular meals; regular outdoor play. Give them nothing they cry for; make them cry in privacy if they insist on crying; act surely and promptly at the first tear drop. If they go into tantrums, splash them well with cool water. Have the family physician see them at least twice every three months, often if he says it is necessary. But don't encourage the tears.

Robust Youngsters Don't Cry
If the crying continues in the loneliness of privacy, examine the child carefully; take his temperature; look at his tongue; feel his pulse. If any sign of ill health appears, put him to bed, in quiet, and say as little as possible. The child who is not in the habit of crying and begins to cry without ceasing, is usually fatigued beyond the point of self-control, and needs to go to bed, or he is entering an illness and needs to go to bed. In either case the family physician should be called. These children will not cry

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME

Marie Schneider's Tested Recipes

CHRISTMAS MENU

When the family comes trooping home for the holidays they find that days of careful preparation have resulted in a wealth of good things to eat—all planned to increase the enjoyment of Christmas time. The cookie jar is full to bursting; there are cakes and puddings, fragrant pies—and on the great day a succulent roast fowl with all the "trimmings."

Preparing that gala holiday dinner calls for careful menu planning that will result in a balanced meal as well as a tasty one. That is where well chosen accessories may be called into play to offset the main dishes.

A festive looking Poinsettia salad may be just the thing to add a touch of color. The "Light as Feather" muffins add to a satisfying menu that may be topped off with a Plum pudding, a traditional Yuletide delicacy.

Here is a typical Christmas menu:

The Menu
Roast Fowl	Giblet Gravy
Bread Dressing	Mashed Potatoes
Celery	Olives
Craberry Jelly	Radishes
Baked Hubbard Squash and Peas	Poinsettia Salad
Light as Feather Muffins	Plum Pudding
Plum Pudding	Hard Sauce
Salted Nuts	Mints
Coffee
6 large apples
3 cups water
1 cup sugar
1 cup red cinnamon candy

everything that way, but subconsciously he was utilizing these hysterical attacks as a final means of trying to win sympathy for himself from the wife and children who had been alienated.

Psychology Is a Vital Science
This man was no ignoramus. He had graduated from college and a professional school. His gross income runs around $1,500 per month. He is a big shot in his city and belongs to various clubs, of which he is president of two.

I state these facts so you may observe that the usual college education may still leave you poorly equipped to meet the emotional and social problems of life unless you have had specific training in psychology.

Through this educational column your editor tries to furnish this training that the majority of American adults never have received and probably never would receive, otherwise.

The best method for preventing divorce and unhappiness is to vaccinate you against those dire ailments early. These daily articles are really intended as daily doses of psychological vaccine by which to protect readers from misery, defeat and despair.

Dr. Crane will give personal attention to questions on Psychological problems. Write him in care of the Appleton Post-Crescent, enclosing a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope and a dime to cover printing and typing costs. Letters and reader's names are never published.

Jumper Outfit

BY ANNE ADAMS

The smart mother knows that a "go together" outfit will make her darling daughter look expensively well-dressed—at little cost. Pattern 4587 is a jaunty three-piece ensemble designed by Anne Adams. The jumper is in just two pattern parts, straps and all, with a double-breasted-effect front buttoning that makes a handy "dress-herself" feature.

The slantwise straps stay UP, and are cut on the straight-grain for easy dress making . . . to prevent stretching . . . and for a smooth finish. The Dutch-girl cap buttons in back to fit any headsize, and may be opened out flat for ironing or packing. A long or short-sleeved blouse is included in this outfit.

Pattern 4587 is available in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6, jumper and cap, takes 1 1/2 yards 54 inch fabric; short sleeved blouse, 1 yard 35 inch fabric; long sleeved blouse, 1 1/2 yards 35 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number.

Send your order to Appleton Post-Crescent, Pattern Department, 243 West 17th St., New York, N. Y.

1 cup suet
1 cup sour or sweet milk
1 cup molasses
1 cup seeded raisins
1 cup chopped figs or dates
Sift flour once before measuring. Take out about 1/2 cup of the flour for dredging the fruit. Mix and sift together the remaining flour, the soda, salt and cinnamon. Chop the suet fine and add to the milk and molasses. Combine the two mixtures and add the fruit which has been dredged with the flour. Fill well greased pudding molds 2-3 full of the mixture. Cover and place in a regular steamer over boiling water (or arrange on rack over boiling water in a large kettle). Cover steamer tightly and steam 3 hours. Serve with hard sauce or any desired liquid sauce.

The Road to Shani Lun

By Rita Mohler Hanson

YESTERDAY: Lynn Britton is in the curious position of being formally betrothed to the Prince of the Mongolian land of Shani Lun, in love with the Prince's trusted messenger, Temu Darin, in the power of her own half-brother Dick (who conspires against the Prince), and an admirer of Sherdock, who is a Mongolian priest about her prophesies, to die. If he does, it may bring danger to Dick.

Sherdock raised his hand in blessing for the men who had assembled. Then he and Dick, the guard, Chin Pak and two Mongol lamas from the Duke's retinue climbed the hill.

Lynn brought a mat from her tent and sat down where she could keep her eyes on the hilltop. She felt impatient and helpless before this strange, Oriental fatalism. Shadows had thickened on the ridges; only on the summit where Sherdock sat, his bright, old eyes to the sky, did a faint reflection of the dying day still glow. Lynn shivered in the biting night air and spoke softly to herself. "He must be cold."

A voice answered, "He is indifferent Tara Lynn."

She started and turned quickly; no one was near, no one had spoken. Yet she had heard Temu's voice as clearly as if she were held in the circle of his arms.

She entered her tent and lay down, covering her face with her hands.

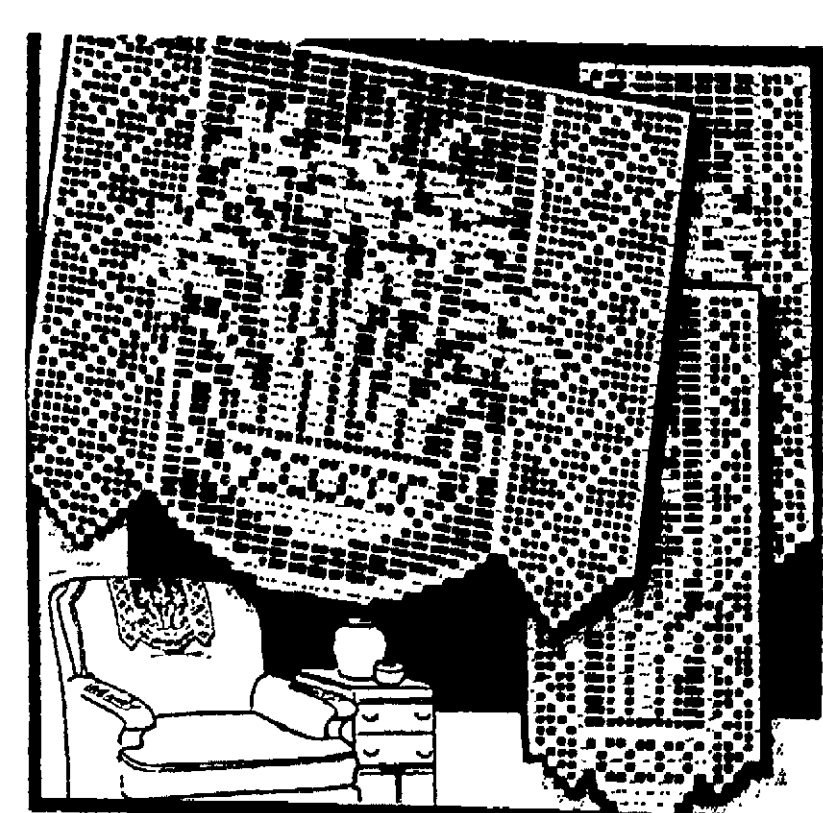

New Plan
When the men came to strike her tent at daybreak, she had hoped herself. She drank a cup of rice water, and mounting her camel, began the day's march. The sky soon became overcast with high flying clouds. The travelers climbed an elevated ridge and saw before them a yet higher ridge that separated them from the vast plains of Shani Lun.

Dick rode up beside Lynn. "If things go well," he said, "we should reach the border tomorrow night. Remember that Sherdock has prepared the people for your appearance."

He struck a little drum at his side and rose. Lynn followed him.

Night School 1st Term Ends

Menasha Adult Classes Will Resume Activities Following Vacation

Menasha — The first term of the Menasha evening and day adult school closed Thursday night, according to S. E. Crockett, director. This break in the winter adult program will allow for a full two weeks holiday recess coinciding with the public school Christmas vacation.

All day adult and evening classes will be resumed as usual the week of Jan. 6. New students will be admitted in all classes at that time. New courses for which 10 or more persons enroll also will be organized providing conditions warrant and competent instructors may be secured.

The first term has been particularly successful this year. A total of 965 adults enrolled in one or more units at the school. They were divided with 425 in homemaking, 134 in commercial, 141 in trade extension, 152 in physical education, and 113 in general improvement subjects.

In addition to the adult enrollment, 43 students are enrolled in the University of Wisconsin extension center and 83 in the juvenile day classes, making a total of 128 general day students.

It is composed of the Rev. W. L. Harms, chairman, C. F. Hodges, Albert C. Hilde, Jr., J. M. Holderby and Dr. T. D. Smith.

The award will be presented at a banquet in January.

Stage Unique Yule Program For Rotarians

Neenah High School Students Represent 14 Foreign Nations

Neenah — A unique Christmas program was staged at the noon meeting of the Neenah Rotary club Thursday at the Valley Inn by 14 Neenah High school boys and girls.

Dressed in costumes representing different nations, the students related the customs of observing Christmas in each country.

Three of the students were born in foreign nations. They were Ronald Vallance, Scotland; Ronald Thompson, England; and Werner Jonscher, Germany.

The others were James Sousours, Greece; Ann Aiello, Italy; Ethel Szucs, Hungary; Ed Pozolinski, Poland; Roy Wiberg, Sweden; Nicholas Kuloga, Russia; Pearl Mallock, Norway; Constance Jorgensen, Denmark; June Wolhuis, Holland; Betty Donovan, Ireland; and Alvira Miller, American Indian.

Principal J. H. Holzman was in charge of the program, and he announced that at the next meeting, Harvey Leaman, high school instructor and attendant at the historic Doty cabin, will be the speaker. He will talk on the early history of Neenah, stressing new information which he recently has gathered.

Employees, Children To Be Entertained at Paper Company Parties

Neenah — The Neenah Paper company's employees and children will be entertained at two Christmas parties, it was reported today.

The children's party will be at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the city hall auditorium, while the employees' party will be at 6:30 Monday evening at the Valley Inn.

The children's party is open to children of employees who are 13 years of age and under, and a special program is being arranged. Over 300 employees are expected to attend the turkey dinner at the Valley Inn.

The committee which is in charge of both parties is composed of Melvin Redlin, chairman, Clarence Skerlean, Ethel Redlin, Donald Godard, Emily Witt, Anna Kolasinski, Harvey Matilow, Hans Paulsen and Dorothy Kolger.

Two Dartball Teams Score Straight Wins

Neenah — Two teams, Hardwood Products and Trinity Lutheran church, scored straight victories in the City Dartball league last night at the recreation building.

Hardwoods won three from Jan-ders, 12-6, 11-5, 16-8. Harold Lemke paced the winners and Elmer Haefel led the losers. The church team won three from Fall fellows, 13-0, 12-2, 11-3. Martin Wachholz sparked the winners and Morris Sawyer led the losers. In the other game, Knights of Pythias won two games from Haase Klinkle and Rhoades Clothing, 5-3, 3-8, 5-1. Al Peterson and George Rosenow led the winners and Carl Drzewski was high for the losers.

Perfect scores were posted by Lemke, G. Chaganos, W. Bryer and M. Mathison, in five games and M. Sawyer who got four and four. Lemke got 12 hits in 10 tries. Sawyer 8 hits in 12 attempts and Wachholz 12 hits in 17 tries.

Zielinski Top Scorer In Intramural League

Neenah — Clarence Zielinski is the leading scorer in the Menasha High school intramural basketball league with 29 points in three games. E. Koslowski is second with 25 points followed by B. Gear with 21.

Wisconsin and Duke are tied for first place in the league with three victories each. Notre Dame and Minnesota are tied for third with two victories and one defeat each. Notre Dame has counted the most points, 88.

Michigan and Navy are tied in fifth with one victory and two defeats each while Ohio and Army are in the cellar with no victories and three defeats. L. E. Lindquist is in charge of the activity.

Stage Yule Program In School Assembly

Neenah — A Christmas program was staged this morning for Neenah High school students in the auditorium.

The band, under the direction of Lester Mais, presented several selections, and 14 boys and girls, dressed in costumes, related how Christmas is observed in foreign countries. Three of the students were foreign born.

The chorus, under the direction of Miss Ruth Roper, sang the cantata, "Spirit of Christmas."

Assessor Returns

Menasha — H. C. Steidl, Menasha assessor, has returned from Madison where he attended a training school for city assessors Wednesday and Thursday under the sponsorship of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities. Various problems of assessment were discussed by representatives of Wisconsin cities, including assessors from LaCrosse, Sheboygan, Manitowish, Waupun and Appleton. League officials and Professor Harold Groge, University of Wisconsin, also spoke at the school sessions.

Haas Declares Italy Finished In African Area

Neenah — Grant C. Haas, Madison, who completed his first of two series of lectures on world affairs at Kimberly school last night, conceded a British victory in the Mediterranean area and Africa.

Declaring that Italy is finished in the African area, Haas said that the Italian army is wiped out and in the hands of the British. Italy will come out of the war without a colonial empire and, if he is fortunate, Mussolini will have only Italy.

Haas contended that Italy has pretended for 18 years to being a great nation but only has looked formidable in a war-torn Europe as long as she wasn't challenged. He said Italy is a liability to Hitler.

Speaking of war loans to England by the United States, Haas said that America should give Britain aid without any expectation of repayment. England will be in no position to repay the United States after the war and should be allowed to resume peacetime industry.

Haas also talked about the change of attitude of the United States in foreign affairs.

Grace Voelker and John Baldauf Will Edit 1941 Yearbook

Menasha — Grace Voelker and John Baldauf have been named co-editors of the 1941 Nicolet yearbook published by the students of Menasha high school. Waldo Friedland will be the business manager and will be assisted by Leonard Kaminski and Hugh Holen.

Menasha — More than 1,000 youngsters are expected to attend the annual Christmas party given by Menasha series No. 1063, Fraternal Order of Eagles, for children of Eagles at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Menasha high school auditorium.

Motion pictures will be shown to the youngsters and toys and bags of candy will be distributed. Santa Claus is expected to visit the group also. Arrangements for the party are being made by John Maciejewski, Joe Riley and Carl Drexler.

Airplane, Hobby Club To Organize Saturday

Neenah — An Airplane and Hobby club will be organized at 1:30 Saturday afternoon at the Neenah recreation building, Paul Stocker, manager, reported today.

The purpose of the club, Stocker said, is to promote an interest in hobbies, and the club is open to boys of all ages. If enough boys are interested, two separate clubs will be formed.

Officers will be elected Saturday afternoon, and it is planned to meet twice a month. Contests will be staged throughout the year and they will be culminated with a large display of all hobbies.

Holzman Is Chairman Of Convention Group

Neenah — Principal J. H. Holzman has been named chairman of education research sectional meeting at next year's state teachers' meeting at Milwaukee, it was reported here today.

Sectional chairmen will attend a conference at Milwaukee at 9:30 Saturday morning, Jan. 11, at which rules and detailed procedure governing building of programs for the Wisconsin Education association convention Nov. 6, 7 and 8, will be outlined. The chairmen will be instructed on the conduct of sections and securing speakers.

Marion Landskron's 512 Tops Banta Loop

Menasha — Marion Landskron scored a 512 series for the best total in the Banta Girls league Wednesday. Esther VanRemortel had a 198 for the top game and finished with a 495 series.

The first place Hearts took 25 games from the second-place Spades while the cellar Clubs won two in three place.

Bethany Children Will Attend Service, Dinner

Neenah — The children of the Bethany home at Waupaca will be guests at the 10:30 worship service in St. Paul's English Lutheran church Sunday morning. Women of the church have arranged entertainment for the children and will serve dinner for them in the church social hall following the service.

Candlelight Service Will Be Held at Menasha Church

Menasha — The First Congregational church will have its annual Christmas candlelight service at 7:30 Sunday evening in the church.

The service will open with prelude selections by Mrs. E. H. Schultz after which Betty Mae Jensen will read the scripture. The choir procession selection will be "Send Out Thy Light." The Rev. Gerald C. Churchill will give the invocation following which the Christmas carol, "O Come All Ye Faithful" will be sung by the choir.

Franklyn M. LeFevre will be narrator for the service. The choir will sing "Ye Watchers and Ye Holy Ones," a seventeenth century melody, at the conclusion of the first reading and "Joseph's Carol" by Marryott at the end of the second reading. F. M. LeFevre will sing the solo. The choir will sing "Hark, What Mean Those Holy Voices" by Heinrich later in the program with Norman Michie singing the solo part.

A women's trio, Mrs. Sue Floyd, Mrs. H. B. Sutton and Mrs. Ralph Moon, will sing "O Holy Night" by Adams and the choir will present "Vigil" by Christiansen with Mrs. R. H. Falkner as soloist.

After the narrator's reading of Monsell's "Light of the World, We Hail Thee," the choir will sing "A Joyous Christmas Song." Mrs. H. B. Sutton will sing the solo part of "Lullaby on Christmas Eve" by Christiansen which the choir will sing. During the offertory, the narrator will read Sara Henderson Hay's "The Search."

Mr. LeFevre will sing "The Little Road Through Nazareth" by Carl Handan prior to the service of the candles as the first worshipper in each pew receives a light for his candle and in turn lights the candle of his neighbor.

Mrs. LeFevre will sing "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne" prior to the prayer by the Rev. Mr. Churchill who will light the candles of hope, faith, love, freedom, joy and service as he prays. Silent meditation will mark the singing by the choir of "Send Out Thy Light." Mrs. Sutton, Miss Virginia Jensen, Victor Fritz and R. K. Robinson will make up the echo quartet for the choir's selection, "Silent Night, Holy Night" by Guber-Wetzel, as the service is conducted with benediction.

Reveal Income Of 'I Am' Cult

Sale of Books and 'Love Gifts' Main Source of Revenue

Los Angeles—(AP)—Evidence concerning financial receipts of the "I Am" movement was added today to the trial records of 10 of its leaders on mail-fraud charges. Included a report, identified by a former secretary of the founder, the late Guy M. Ballard, that during a 17-day meeting of followers here last year, $8,043 was taken in from the sale of books and $9,435 additional as "love gifts."

At another meeting here in 1938, the report showed, sales of books totaled $14,893 and gifts amounted to $12,454. Receipts from the Los Angeles meetings, it was disclosed, were larger than those at Chicago, where the movement was organized, or at New York, Detroit and other cities.

The witness, P. B. Crouse, now an industrial engineer at an aircraft factory, testified concerning an argument between Mrs. Edna W. Ballard, widow of the founder, and Charles Sindelar, Los Angeles artist. Sindelar was identified in previous testimony as the painter of pictures of Christ and St. German, an "ascended master," for which it was claimed both had posed in person.

Crouse quoted Mrs. Ballard as telling the artist: "When we took you up you were penniless and in the gutter. Your Christ pictures were selling for 10 cents a dozen and you didn't know where to turn."

Both Mrs. Ballard and Sindelar are defendants in the present trial.

Henry Kloes, Former Milwaukee Banker, Dies

Milwaukee—(AP)—Henry Kloes, 79, a former vice president of the First Wisconsin National bank, died at his home late yesterday.

Kloes resigned from the bank in 1929 because of failing health, terminating 52 years of service. He joined the bank staff as a 15-year-old messenger.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Sentiment for British Loan Swells in Last Six Months

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J.—The British request this week for American financial aid focuses attention again on one of the most important questions that will come before the new congress in January—the question whether the Johnson Act should be modified to permit loans to Britain.

With Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Relations Committee advocating amendment, and Senator Hiram Johnson, author of the act, fighting any alteration of the law, the controversy is already well under way.

Because of the vital importance of the issue, the Institute is now conducting a series of surveys to determine what the trend of public sentiment on the question is. The latest study, completed just before the British request for financial help, indicates that sentiment for changing the act is approximately the same today as it was a month ago. But there has been a substantial increase since last May.

The trend has been as follows:

"The Johnson Act prevents any country which has stopped paying interest on its debt of the last World War from borrowing money in the United States. Would you approve of changing this law so that England could borrow money from our government?"

May, 1940 35% 65%
Nov. 35% 65%
Today 54 46

Only one voter in ten (9 per cent) was undecided or without an opinion in the latest survey.

Whether sentiment will be changed by England's formal request for funds, and the discussion which it is certain to provoke, later Institute studies will reveal.

Trend Is Uniform

It is clear from the studies so far that a substantial number of voters have changed their views on the Johnson Act since last spring. Who are these people?

Interestingly enough, they come from all income groups, age groups and sections, which means that the change in sentiment cuts across all walks of life. There are variations, of course. Among Roosevelt voters, for example, there has been a great change from among Willkie voters. There has been a somewhat sharper increase in sentiment for revising the Johnson Act among the

BABY OCTOPUS
Nature is wasteful in some ways. This is true in regard to the seeds of plants and the eggs of animals. Animals of the sea lay far more eggs than ever will hatch and grow into adults. Fish eggs and baby fish vanish by the millions into the mouths of large fish, but so many eggs are placed in the water that some almost surely will get past all dangers. It does happen, sometimes, that a race of animals is destroyed and becomes "extinct," but that is not the common story.

One strange ocean animal, the octopus, lays from 30,000 to 60,000 eggs in a season. Many of these hatch into baby octopi.

A new hatched octopus is smaller than a cherry. It rises to the surface, and floats or swims about. The chances are a hundred to one that it will be gobbled up before long by some animal enemy which wants it for food.

The octopus is a type of cuttlefish. Its name means "eight feet." It has eight legs, or "arms," as they are called more often.

As the octopus grows, its arms grow and may reach a length of many feet. Full grown octopi off the coast of Lower California often have arms from six to 10 feet long, and the arms of some other kinds reach far greater size.

Working off the coast, at a depth of perhaps 75 or 100 feet, a diver is likely to see an octopus. If it is a large one, it is a real danger. The long arms can be wrapped around a man, crushing him and preparing him to be taken into the strong mouth at the center of the animal's body.

A diver is protected, to some extent, by his metal and canvas covering. An octopus which feels such covering is likely to decide that it isn't grasping anything fit to eat, and then will let the possible victim escape.

A diver tells of a time when he was not so fortunate as to be allowed to go free after an octopus seized him while he was in a diving suit. He took in air and dropped off the lead weights on his shoes. Both he and the octopus were carried upward to the surface. Men in the boat above saw the monster almost crushing the diver's life from him, and quickly hacked off the arms, or tentacles. The diver was saved by their good work.

The Road to Shani Lun

...and the Duke will hasten on to the capital.

"I want you to stay in the border town of Forchi for the first night. Then we will send a state automobile to carry you to Delun where you will make a triumphant entry the following day. Since you're supposed to be the reincarnation of a Chinese princess, it might be well for you to dress in Chinese garb for your entrance to the palace. We'll arrange that nothing be supplied you at our headquarters in Dorchi."

"Then what?" asked Lynn soberly. "After I get to Delun, then what?"

"Then this country's ours and we can do with it as we please," he cried exultantly. "Doesn't it thrill you, Lynn? You shall civilize the people, if that is your wish, and I shall make us all rich beyond the dreams of avarice."

She made no reply. He scrutinized her face bent down in thought.

"Right now, you look the image of the brooding Tara," he remarked, a touch of awe in his tone. "By God, Lynn, I believe you do belong to these people! That old magician, Sherdock, must have known what he was talking about. You're coming home!"

Lynn raised her head, her cheeks suddenly flushed, her eyes bright and shining. "Somehow, I feel myself that I'm coming home!"

Shortly before noon the weather changed for the worse; the wind clouds thickened and darkened. A black tempest was upon them. The whole caravan became demoralized. Lynn felt as if she were breasting a wall of water full of pebbles. The animals were blown sideways and disappeared from sight. She saw the camel-litter on which Sherdock's coffin was carried suddenly torn apart by the terrified beasts.

Lynn tried to stop her camel. Instead, the beast suddenly bolted and raced southward with the storm, through a narrow defile and into a wide upland valley. At first the girl was more excited than frightened. After its immediate fury, the storm had slackened somewhat.

But as time passed and the animal kept on at a terrific pace as if it were demented, Lynn began to wonder what was going to become of her. She could do nothing with her beast, and to jump from the animal's back, she felt, would be like jumping from a speeding express train.

At dusk the storm died down and the stars appeared. But the strange, mad drive within the camel kept on. They were climbing now into a higher desert mountain region. During the night they passed near a cluster of yurts with several camels tethered nearby. Lynn hoped her beast might join them, but it kept on blindly, its neck stretched out as if it were being led by an invisible cord.

At dawn Lynn saw she was being taken into yet wilder and higher country where spring had barely touched the soil. A herd of antelope ran ahead of them for a distance and then disappeared at one side of the course.

She saw an altar on a hillock and a man with a long rifle rise up beside it. She screamed to him as she passed, but he stared stupidly and let her disappear from sight. The terrible journey was telling on Lynn yet she could not see that her mount had lessened its pace at all. She planned at the next sight of human beings to jump from the animals back and take the consequence.

Rescue The plan had barely formulated when she heard a call. She turned and looked back. A man on a black camel was following her. He shouted something and raised his rifle. She recognized him.

Temu Darin! He rode the black camel that had killed a man and run away.

As he held the rifle trained upon her, Lynn thought for a moment that Temu meant to kill her. Then, common sense returned and she knew he was aiming at her mount. She drew herself up and crouched. The bullet did not come immediately. But when the beast made a turn, following the contour of the draw, Temu shot.

The animal grunted and pitched forward. Lynn fell clear in a stretch of sand.

Temu had come up. He dismounted and ran to Lynn. "Are you hurt?"

She shook her head. She was trembling uncontrollably. He knelt before her, beads of perspiration on his upper lip. He took a deep breath.

"I hope I'm never again called upon to do such a thing. But my camel was at the end of his resources; he could follow you no longer."

Lynn dropped back and stretched out her wracked body, so weary that she was barely conscious. Temu looked at her a moment before he gently turned her over and massaged her aching back. Then he bade her sleep.

In the late afternoon he awakened her and made her drink tea with parched barley stirred into it. He explained that he and his men had been closing in upon Dick's caravan when the storm broke.

"My camel followed you. You see," he smiled, "it does not do any good for you to run away; I always find you. You cannot escape your destiny."

She responded, "I'm not defeated yet." He had moved her, she observed, to a spot from which she could not see the dead beast and had placed her on a fur robe. She looked at his black camel standing near, stiff and immobile, making none of the camellious snarls and gurgles which signify well-being.

"What possessed my animal?" she asked.

"She went berserk. They do that sometimes, inexplicably, and travel blindly for days until they fall dead. No native will interfere with a camel thus possessed, as they think it would bring bad luck."

"See what it brought you," she said, signifying herself, his spent animal, and the desolate landscape about them.

"You're not bad luck to me, no matter what the appearance." He smiled as he said it, and she suddenly remembered that Sherdock was dead and she would have to tell him.

He looked at his riding beast, then went over and gave it a feed of dried peas; it refused to eat.

He came back and sat down beside Lynn.

"This has been a terrific journey. We must have come well over fifty miles since the storm."

Lynn marvelled, yet she knew that camels had been known to travel at high rates of speed.

"Were you expecting to capture Dick and his men?" she asked.

"That was our hope, but the storm shot our plan to pieces. Now, I don't know what will happen. Our present concern is with our personal safety."

"What became of Peggy?" she asked.

"Returned to Nanking in that bombing plane that was temporarily grounded. We'll have to rest here tonight and in the morning search for an encampment of nomads."

Selected N. Y. Stocks Turn to Higher Levels

Majority of Shares, However, Fail to Make Upward Progress

New York—(AP)—Selected stocks turned toward rallying territory in today's market but progress for the majority was far from spectacular and many issues remained in a rut. Slight upward tendencies prevailed at the start. There was a subsequent slip, then fresh buying came in and, around mid-day, steels, shipbuilders, coppers, rails and specialties showed gains of fractions to a point or more. Prices wavered in some cases at the last. Dealings were lively at intervals although resting periods were plentiful. Transfers were in the neighborhood of 800,000 shares.

Few outstanding bullish items were in the news budget and brokers attributed the early swing mainly to the technical reasoning of analysts that, in view of five successive declining sessions, the list was entitled to a comeback of modest proportions if only temporarily.

Among restraining influences were: Continued apprehension over a possible invasion of England before the United States can furnish additional aid; a little more account adjustments for the income blanks; persistent worries over 1941 taxes in the light of the proposed "leasing" of billions in armament materials to Britain, and the desire of speculative contingents to await the ironing out of wrinkles in the home defense program before taking a definite market position.

Advancing inclinations were displayed by United States Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Boeing, Eastman Kodak, Dow Chemical, General Electric, N. Y.

Shipbuilding, American Shipbuilding, Electric Boat, International Paper preferred, Anaconda, Kennecott, U. S. Rubber and Great Northern.

U. S. treasuries dipped in the bond department and corporation loans were irregular. Commodities were mixed. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to up 1 cent a bushel and corn gained 1/4 to 1/2. In late transactions cotton was 10 cents a bale advanced to off 5 cents.

On the side of steels was the expectation that mill operations next week would be maintained at near-record rates. Fears that priorities for armament needs would be instituted in the metal sector were allayed somewhat by the opinion expressed by Chairman Girdler of

Wheat Prices Remain Firm

December Prices Move Up to 89-Cent Mark at Chicago

Chicago—(AP)—Buying of December wheat contracts, the price of which advanced about a cent, kept the grain market firm today in the face of trade factors centering around actual and prospective domestic supplies bearishly affecting deferred deliveries.

The December price moved up to above 89 cents, being quoted at about 5 cents premium over May, the widest of the season, and more than 10 cents over July, 1941, contracts representing the new crop. Buyers of December were believed to be previous "short" sellers covering their obligations to deliver, and cash grain dealers or consumers wishing to take delivery.

Receipts were: wheat 10 cars, corn 120, oats 87. Wheat closed unchanged to 1 cent higher than yesterday, December 89 1/2; May 84 1/2; corn 1 1/2 up, December 60 1/2, May 16 1/2; oats 1 1/2 lower.

Republic that there was no possibility of a steel shortage. He pointed out the industry's capacity was around 83,000,000 tons annually and that maximum requirements for defense purposes for any year should not exceed 8,000,000 tons.

Friends of the motors were heartened by Ward's estimate that the last quarter of 1940 would show 1,000,000 new car and truck registrations, a new top for these three months. A slight dip in the current week's output was undisturbing. It was suggested by some observers, though, that defense bottlenecks might result in curtailment of production within the next four or five months, or considerably earlier than most had looked for.

Winter Wheat Yield For '41 Estimated at 633 Million Bushels

Washington—(AP)—The agriculture department reported today that the indicated production of winter wheat in 1941 was 633,000,000 bushels. Production this year was 589,151,000 bushels, last year 568,741,000, and the 10-year average, 571,067,000.

The area of winter wheat seeded this fall for harvest next year was estimated at 46,271,000 acres, compared with 43,820,000 acres seeded in the fall of 1939 for this year's crop, and 47,807,000 acres, the average seeded in the 10 years, 1928-37. The harvested acreage was 36,147,000 acres last year, and the 1928-37 10-year average, 39,453,000 acres.

The condition of the crop Dec. 1 was 84 per cent of a normal, compared with 55 a year ago, 72 two years ago, and 79, the 1928-37 average.

The indicated production, the report said, is based on the past relationship between Dec. 1 condition and yield per acre, with some allowance for the probable effect of weather conditions during the past summer and fall.
